HEALTH CONDITIONS AT OUR ATLANTIC BASES

BY REAR ADM. ROSS T. MCINTIRE
Surgeon General, U. S. Navy

THE many Atlantic bases which stretch like a bow across the front of the Eastern seaboard of the continental United States, and the Eastern edge of the Caribbean area, extend from Newfoundland to British Guiana. These include not only those recently obtained in British possessions but also those we have long utilized in Cuba, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands. Newfoundland is off the southeastern corner of Canada, and British Guiana is on the northeastern corner of South America so the span of latitude is from 50° N to 5° N. The span of miles in a straight line is about 2500. If Iceland is included as a northern extension of this bow, it adds another 15° of latitude and nearly 1500 more miles. In consequence, the varieties of environment and climate range from almost the Arctic to the deep tropics, with corresponding variations in the diseases and health conditions to be encountered. Hippocrates, 2300 years ago, in his great book, "On Airs, Waters, and Places," first drew attention to the importance of locality and climate to diseases. Since his time, with increasing knowledge of geography, climatology and medicine, the importance of environment and climate has to be taken into account by all our modern epidemiologists. It is plain, therefore from the wide extent of the earth's surface over which these Atlantic Bases are placed, that they present many important problems in preventive medicine to the Medical Department of the Navy.

These bases can be divided into two main groups as regards to disease conditions, a north temperate group, and a tropical group. The first contains Newfoundland and Iceland. Both of these localities have insular climates, cool and damp in both summer and winter. Far from the popular opinion because of their extreme northern latitude neither are very cold in winter. There is, however, much fog and rain, and the winters are long with diminished sunlight, due in part to the extreme shortness of the winter day. In general the climate is a healthful one and the many infectious diseases of the tropics are absent. However, during the winter the acute respiratory diseases are prevalent, and epidemics of some of the contagious conditions such as measles, mumps, or diphtheria occur. There is also considerable tuberculosis. Iceland formerly had a great deal of infantile tetanus and was also an endemic area for echinococcus disease. Iceland raises a great many sheep and the shepherd dog was an important member of every farm family. The dog is the principal carrier of the echinococcus disease. At present, however, as a result of modern public health measures carried out by the health officials of Iceland, both infantile tetanus and echinococcus disease are uncommon.

Newfoundland is a British colony separate from Canada. Health conditions are similar to those in Iceland except that

New Army Personnel Policies are Announced

Changes in Army personnel policies aimed to give greater flexibility to the forces in the field and to further the "one Army" ideal were promulgated this week.

One change is that permitting the transfer of National Guard officers from the units with which they entered the service to any other assignment in the Army of the United States. Formerly it had been the policy to keep such officers with their original units. However, under the new arrangement any officer, Regular, Reserve, or National Guard may be assigned to any duty for which he is otherwise qualified, without regard to component. For example, Guard officers overseas for troop duty may be assigned to administrative duties elsewhere.

Taken together with the new instructions, printed in the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL last week, whereby Army commanders may reassign any officer of their command without reference to the War Department, this adds great flexibility to the handling of personnel in the field forces.

It was also announced that the promotion system for National Guard officers will be changed by the new policy. Advances in grade will no longer be made without regard to length of service. In general, the present method of promotion by selection will be continued, with the requirements for promotion (such as length of commissioned service) altered somewhat to bring them more nearly into accord with similar requirements for officers of other components.

Another policy is that which aims to assure that by 30 June 1942 at least 66-2/3 of the officers of the Regular Army will be on duty with troops. During the last war, because of the unusual requirements for training and overhead in this country, only about one-third of the Regular Officers got to France, where only a relatively small percentage got to the front, many being required for the technical duties in the Service of Supply.

Approximately 43 percent of the Regular officers are now on overhead duty, whereas under the new policy this percentage will be reduced to 32 by next June. The objective is to reduce the number of Regular officers on duty at the War Department to 2,247, those on duty with Corps Area Service Commands to 1,434, and ground officers on duty with the Army Air Forces to 196, making a total of only 3,877 Regulars on overhead duty. The additional requirements for overhead will be met by the use of National Guard and Reserve officers.

It is estimated that there are 1,721 Regular officers who are over-age in their grade for troop duty. Eventually all of these will be moved to overhead duties.

Of the over-age Regulars 515 are colonels, 946 lieutenant colonels and 260 majors. Over age in the Arms are 402 colonels, 633 lieutenant colonels and 140 majors, while over age in the services are 113 colonels, 313 lieutenant colonels, and 120 majors.

Additions to Naval Academy

Expected to take between 18 months to two years to complete, construction of two additions to Bancroft Hall, midshipmen's dormitory at Annapolis, and a new recitation hall involving an expenditure of $2,521,000 have been completed in less than a year. Rapid completion of the project was brought about by the Navy Department's splitting contracts.

The additions to Bancroft Hall will accommodate approximately 300 midshipmen each, and were turned over to the Naval Academy on 8 Sept. Finishing touches are now being applied to the recitation hall which will be ready for use by 1 Oct.

These additions were made necessary by an increase in midshipmen, enrollment rising from 1,704 in 1934, to 2,602 in 1940, and finally to 3,118 in 1941.

Medical Officer Changes

The following changes of station of medical officers of the Navy were announced by the Navy Department this week:

Capt. Griffith E. Thomas, (MC), from the 11th Naval District to the 11th Naval District at Destroyer Base, San Diego, Calif.

Capt. Thomas W. Raison, (MC), from Destroyer Base, San Diego, Calif., to Medical Officer in command, Naval Dispensary, Long Beach, Calif.

Capt. John F. Riordan, (MC), from Medical Officer in command, Naval Dispensary, Long Beach, Calif., to 4th Naval District, Philadelphia, Pa., for duty at the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

Capt. Abraham H. Allen, (MC), from Philadelphia Navy Yard, to 5th Naval District for duty as district medical officer that district.

Capt. John B. Kufman, (MC), from 4th Medical District to retire.

Capt. Carleton I. Wood, (MC), from Naval Dispensary, Long Beach, Calif. to 3rd Naval District, N. Y.

Capt. Ernest W. Brown, (MC), from Brooklyn Navy Yard, to Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, Wash., D. C.

Fruit Juices for Navy

A bill providing that the Navy ration shall include canned or powdered or concentrated fruit or tomato or vegetable juices was passed by the Senate on 17 Sept. The measure (S. 1521) now goes to the House of Representatives.

An amendment was offered applying the provision to the Army, but Senator Andrews stated that he had talked with Army officials and they said they did not want to be included. The amendment was rejected.

500th Plane Completed

Completion of the 500th plane in the training-ship program at the Philadelphia Naval Aircraft Factory was celebrated this week at the Philadelphia Navy Yard with brief ceremonies, during which Rear Adm. Adolphus E. Watson, commandant of the Fourth Naval District, congratulated the 2,500 workers at the factory upon their production.

Army Selection Board Promotes 499 Majors

Selection of 499 promotion list majors of the ground arms and services and 90 Air Corps officers for promotion to the grade of lieutenant colonel was announced by the War Department this week. Inclusion of the Air Corps officers, who already held advanced rank under the Air Corps Act, was made to protect their seniority.

The senior officer selection for advancement was number 544 on the promotion list, while the junior officer selected was number 1288. Thus there were 745 officers in the group from which promotions were made. Of this total, 589 (including the Air officers) were selected. Thus 79 percent of the officers considered were selected for promotion. This percentage is somewhat higher than in the case of the promotion of lieutenant colonels to colonel in June, when only 52 percent of those considered were selected.

It is probable that a second group of lieutenant colonels will be selected for promotion to colonel within a week or so.

The official announcement of the promotions this week was made as follows:

"Carrying out its policy made public on 29 Aug. 1941, that a large group of majors with from 22 to 23 years' commissioned service in the Regular Army would be promoted to the temporary rank of lieutenant colonel so as to give them their mobilization rank, the War Department today made public a list of 499 majors who will soon be given this temporary promotion.

"By speeding up the temporary promotion of Regular officers, the War Department is pursuing its policy of removing inequalities between officers of the Regular Army and the Reserve Corps. Approximately 3,700 officers of the Regular Army and the Reserve Corps from second lieutenant to lieutenant colonel will receive temporary promotions under this new policy, the greater number to be promoted being members of the Officers' Reserve Corps.

"The promotions of majors to temporary lieutenant colonels were made on the approved recommendations of a selection board appointed by the War Department. In addition to majors of the ground arms and services, 90 officers of the Air Corps with the same length of service as ground officers, and who have held the temporary grade of lieutenant colonel since 23 Aug. 1941, are also on the list.

"The complete list of 589 officers (including Air officers) follows:

Editors Discuss Significance of Retarded Invasion of Russia

EVEN while President Roosevelt's "shoot first" declaration was receiving prime attention from newspaper editors throughout the world in front page stories and in analytical editorials, still other editorials told American readers that the German invasion of Russia was not proceeding on schedule, and that Adolph Hitler had better alter his timetable.

The Post Dispatch, St. Louis, Mo., says, "For the first time since this war began in September, 1939, slaughter of soldiers has reached first World War dimensions." Continuing the Post Dispatch says, "As the Russian campaign goes into the third month, as the Nazi timetable falls farther and farther behind, Hitler finds himself in a kind of war for which he admits he has no stomach. . . . After many victories against weak nations, Hitler has caught a Tartar."

Expressing the belief that if Hitler is stopped in Russia, England would then be in a position to cross the English Channel, the Eagle, Wichita, Kans., says, "Arrest of Hitler's campaign in Russia will switch quickly the fighting scene to the Middle East and North Africa, with an early invitation to the British generals to seize the initiative there. With the south shore of the Mediterranean once under control," the Eagle adds, "the British can move with ships, planes, and troops to occupy the whole of Italy and their possession of it can cause Hitler to lower his guard at the English Channel and give the heavy British forces their chance to cross into France."

The News, Miami, Fla., notes the imminent approach of winter weather in Russia, but recalls to its readers that Italy successfully invaded Ethiopia and Germany, Poland in spite of bad weather. The News says, "With relatively little aid from outside as yet, Russia already has held out well beyond the time Hitler conceded and the rest of a reluctant world supposed was the limit. Now, more than ever, to get to winter and through it, Russia needs all the strength America and England can throw."

The Kansas City, Mo., Times, in a pointed editorial says, "If Hitler's prophetic license has not been revoked, it should at least be suspended, pending further developments on the Eastern front."

Shipbuilding Survey

The Navy Department announced this week that every vessel authorized by law has been contracted for and presented a survey revealing the astounding progress in the creation of the greatest array of fighting ships under one flag that the world has ever seen.

The speeded naval shipbuilding program which is yet to reach crescendo is already showing tangible results in the launching of battleships, destroyers, torpedo boats, cruisers, and fighting craft of all categories. On top of the $7,234,262,178 that the Navy plans to spend on 2,831 ships of all classes ordered since 1 Jan. 1940, $460,000,000 already has been allocated for the expansion of shipbuilding facilities, public and private, the survey reveals.

Production line methods wherever possible are being used to turn out the new vessels. This is accomplished through the maximum possible utilization of duplicate designs plus the fact that the Navy Department had a lesser program of ship construction under way when the emergency program was undertaken.

Of the total number of ships ordered, 968 ships of all classes and design already are building for the world's mightiest two-ocean fleet. The list of these ships follows:

Battleships	17

Foreign Military News-Digest

The ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL is pleased to announce that it will resume publication next week of its digest of foreign military thought, as expressed in the professional literature of other nations. The feature will appear each month under the heading, "Foreign Military News-Digest."

has converted to war use 193 vessels for the ever-growing fleet of auxiliaries, such as hospital ships, store ships, oilers, supply and repair vessels. Moreover, 81 vessels are now under conversion and will be added to the fleet just as soon as the necessary alterations are completed. The bulk of this work is being done in private shipyards although Navy yards are handling a considerable quantity of it also.

The Navy's gigantic expansion program is being carried forward in 11 government shipyards, six located on the Atlantic coast and five on the Pacific. The private yards engaged on government contracts involving the navy are as follows:

- 44 on the Atlantic—101 contracts.
- 32 on the Pacific—51 contracts.
- 10 on the Gulf Coast—12 contracts.
- 24 on the Great Lakes and Inland—41 contracts.

It is emphasized that these contract figures do not include small boats or lend-lease contracts.

In his speech to the American Legion at Milwaukee on Monday, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox estimated that at the end of 1941 there would be added to the Navy roster a total of 258 auxiliaries of the sea-going types, and approximately 500 small vessels of all classes, bringing a total strength in these classifications to about 1130.

A comparison of the Navy shipbuilding activities of 1940 with those of 1941 gives a clear picture of the speed-up:

The Post, Charleston, S. C., like the Miami News, takes note of the severe Russian winters and says, "If the Soviet forces can keep up this surprising resistance until General Winter enters upon the scene, Hitler will have to throw aside his now tattered timetable and frame a new 'crusade' schedule."

Commenting further on the weather theme, the Greenville, S. C. News says, "The German people are aware of the fact that although the Nazi war machine may be pretty good on dry ground, there is reason to believe that Russian sleighmanship may be superior to that of the Nazi tank drivers after winter closes down."

In the same editorial that states and explains why Americans have little respect for Russian political principles, the Tribune, Lawrence, Mass., says, "Soviet soldiers are offering an epic resistance fighting to the death, burning their bridges behind them, destroying great public works, leaving a parched earth for the conquerors." The Tribune continues, "because of abhorrence of Soviet ideology and of the Enigma of the Kremlin, who charts the destinies of a great nation, admiration of Russia's present course in the war will be yielded reluctantly. Nevertheless it will be richly deserved."

The Albany News, N. Y., adds still another thought to the retarded invasion in an editorial which says, "For the first time since the Russian war began, Nazi papers are permitted to speculate upon the possibility that the campaign in the East may drag throughout the winter. This," the News concludes, "is bad news for the Germans."

The Chronicle, San Francisco, Calif., employs the second anniversary of the Russian-German non-aggression pact on 23 Aug., as the theme of an editorial which says, "It is to be hoped that American appeasers and isolationists who think business can be done with Hitler will reflect upon the history of this day—the second anniversary of the Nazi-Soviet non-aggression pact."

With regards to treaties with Hitler, the Clarion-Ledger, Jackson, Miss., says, "Recollection of how quickly Russia learned the danger of trying to do business with Hitler rebukes those who say we should try it."

The year 1941 is a particularly notable one so far as the Navy is concerned—for in the past eight and one-half months the world has seen two powerful battleships, the USS Washington and the USS North Carolina added to the battleline, the launching in June of the USS South Dakota, and on 23 Sept. will see the launching of the new USS Massachusetts.

That vessel, somewhat similar in design to her sister ships in this same group, will mount nine sixteen-inch guns and a broadside battery of 20 dual purpose five-inch guns. She will generate speed in excess of 27 knots from engines capable of 115,000 horsepower.

The new USS Massachusetts will be launched from the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Company's yards at Quincy, Mass., in a colorful ceremony.

The United States Navy has commissioned more combatant ships since the beginning of the expansion program due to World War II than in the 14 years between 1922 and 1937.

With both Navy and private yards working around the clock, a total of 135 fighting ships has been added to the roster of Uncle Sam's sea-going forces in this new period, or just 55 less than all combatant vessels laid down in the years 1922-1939.

Since the building program began to hit its stride, the following figures indicate the progress made:

Fiscal year 1938—25 combatant ships totaling 108,000 tons commissioned.

Fiscal year 1939—17 combatant ships totaling 67,780 tons commissioned.

The first noticeable acceleration in America's naval re-awakening came in 1934 when the Navy Department ordered laid down two aircraft carriers, two cruisers, 21 destroyers and two patrol gunboats, a total tonnage of 94,853 tons.

In the following year, 1935, eight cruisers were laid down along with 14 destroyers and five submarines. The next year saw one aircraft carrier, one cruiser, six destroyers and seven submarines on the ways.

It was in 1937 that the Navy Department laid down its first battleship in nearly twenty years, conscious of the fact that other nations were adding capital vessels to their fleets as the result of the scrapping of the arms limitation treaties. Also in 1937 the keels of 14 destroyers and six submarines were laid down.

The year 1938 and 1939, however, pointed clearly to further world upheaval as indicated by our naval building figures. In 1938 there were laid down another battleship, 14 destroyers, four submarines, two destroyer tenders, one seaplane tender, three tugs and two oilers and in 1939 came the keels for two battleships, one aircraft carrier, 12 destroyers, seven submarines, three sub chasers, two mine sweepers, one sub tender and one oiler.

The last figure made public by the Navy Department as to the total tonnage of ships under construction was 2,222,400.

It is striking to note that the total tonnage laid down by the Navy from 1922-1939 was 767,290 as compared with 1,528,053 for Great Britain in the same period, 740,108 by Japan (estimated), 679,506 by France, and 528,376 by Italy. The Navy's total number of keels laid, 1922-1939 totaled 190 as against 450 by Great Britain, 238 by Japan (estimated), and believed to exceed that number, 263 by France and 284 by Italy.

Officer Candidate Schools

Changes in policy regarding Officer Candidate Schools were announced by the War Department this week.

Of the 2,600 enlisted men who will take the three months' courses commencing in October, 1941, some 650 will be Selectees of four months' service who will be selected by the Commanding Generals of Replacement Training Centers and will report directly to the Officer Candidate Schools from these centers. Of the remaining 1,950 officer candidates, about one-half will be Selectees, the other half being members of the Regular Army and National Guard.

From the service at large, men between the ages of 21 and 29, who have completed five months' service on 1 October will be eligible for selection. Formerly the maximum age was 37 years. The present reduction to a maximum of 29 years will not be applied to Selectees already inducted, nor to members of the Regular Army and National Guard who originally enlisted in the service subsequent to 27 Aug. 1940. These last will continue to be eligible prior to their 37th birthdays.

Another change in policy permits graduates of Officer Candidate Schools, who do not desire a year's active duty as second lieutenants, to be awarded certificates of capacity for appointment as second lieutenants in the Army of the United States. They will then be returned to duty with their organizations to complete their periods of service as enlisted men.

THE UNITED STATES ARMY

General Marshall's Address

Speaking out strongly against the movement for a separate air force, General George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, told members of the American Legion on 15 Sept. that the set-up we have adopted for our own use approximates that of Germany as closely as is possible under our system of government.

Addressing the Legion convention in Milwaukee, General Marshall declared that he has but one purpose, one mission, and that is "to provide the most efficient Army in the world."

"Given the American type of soldier and our war industries operating at top speed; given your aggressive support on the home front, and it can be done, and it will be done in time."

In his address General Marshall said:

"Although the President has proclaimed a state of emergency, the Army for all practical purposes is still operating under peace-time conditions. Perhaps it is this unusual, unprecedented situation which has resulted in a lack of understanding by the public as well as parents of soldiers and the soldiers themselves, regarding fundamental military requirements. The power of an army cannot be measured in mere numbers. It is based on a high state of discipline and training; on a readiness to carry out its mission wherever and whenever the Commander-in-Chief and Congress decide. Any compromise with those requirements and that purpose not only minimizes our efforts but largely vitiates our development of military power."

"This Army belongs to the American people—it is their Army, your Army. What it does, what it is, are naturally matters of personal interest to all of our people; not only to those who have relatives in uniform, but to every citizen depending on the Army for security. Despite the pros and cons which have attended every issue debated during the past year, whether on the floors of Congress, in the press, or over the radio, I am certain that everyone is in agreement on one point—that is, this country must have the best army in the world."

"Now, as veteran soldiers, I submit to you men of the Legion the impossibility of developing an efficient army if decisions which are purely military in nature are continuously subjected to investigation, cross-examination, debate, ridicule, and public discussion by pressure groups, or by individuals with only a superficial knowledge of military matters, or of the actual facts in the particular case. I submit that there is a clear line of demarcation between the democratic freedom of discussion which we are determined to preserve and a destructive procedure which promotes discontent and destroys confidence in the Army."

"As Chief of Staff I am largely responsible for the military program and for the decisions of subordinates. Mistakes have been made and it is to be expected that more will be made. However, I am certain that we in the Army are the most severe critics and also, we can best detect deficiencies and we are better prepared to determine the method for their correction."

"Please have these considerations in mind. A sane, a wonderful step has been taken by this country in adopting a policy of preparing its military forces in time of peace, as the wisest of precautionary measures in the face of a world crisis. The very fact that we have shown such unprecedented wisdom in the military way presents the most serious difficulty for those responsible for the development of the Army. With a clear-cut task before us well known to the troops, the development of the Army would be comparatively a simple matter. But must we declare war in order to facilitate training and morale, must you burn down the building in order to justify the Fire Department?

"The local posts of the Legion can do much to bring the people at home to a better understanding of the requirements of the situation. Even you veterans probably do not realize the result of appeals of the young man angling for a home-made cake or bragging to his parents or his girl of the hardships he endures, or grousing over the failure of his leaders to recognize his particular ability by immediate promotion. The War Department at times receives a veritable avalanche of criticisms or pressures resulting from such ordinary soldier reactions as these. The incidents in themselves are often amusing, as in the case of the mother who complained that her son wasn't getting enough to eat, and we found her boy had gained sixteen pounds in twenty days. But the total effect is really serious. As I read confidential reports from abroad there is a startling similarity between our present situation in this respect and that which affected the late lamented Army of France. Criticism, justified or otherwise, is to be expected. In fact, it is as inevitable as a Congressional investigation, but when its nature or purpose is to cause disunity within the Army, I say, direct such criticisms at me personally, but leave the Army alone. Don't tear down what you are striving so hard to build up."

"Let me cite an example of what I mean. Take the matter of a separate Air Force. Because we are convinced that the establishment of a separate Air Force would not only be a grave error, but would completely disrupt the splendid organization now in process of building, we are accused of being unprogressive, jealous of prerogatives, and incredibly shortsighted.

"On the basis of a cold-blooded analysis of facts, the matter has been studied in great detail by the War Department during the operations in which foreign nations are now involved. I can assure you that nothing has developed as a result of the present war which indicates that a change should be made in the present setup in the United States. Comparisons are drawn that two nations whose air forces have attained the greatest success have so-called separate air forces. Here again we encounter a confusion of facts. Consider, for instance, the case of our friends, the British. Except for the gallant and truly remarkable defense of the British Isles which is a special problem having little application to our problem of hemisphere defense, the lack of unity of command between the air and ground forces has courted disaster in virtually every operation they have undertaken. In the operations in Belgium and France, in Norway, in Greece, in Crete and in the Middle East this lack of unity of command has remained a continuous, unsolved problem. In fact, the British have found it necessary to modify the separate air arm idea with respect to naval aviation. More recently they have been improvising special groups to operate more closely with ground troops.

"The ex-democracy of France had a separate air force which operated on a basis similar to that which some individuals are now proposing that we adopt. France was defeated and reduced to a state of vassalage in a five-weeks' campaign. The Italian air force which nurtured the theory of total war from the air and which has so-called independent control has yet to be effective in the present war. Contrary to popular belief, the German air force is not independent of the ground arms in the generally conceived sense, but is closely coordinated by means of a system of command and staff over and above all civil departments, which would not be acceptable to a democracy such as the United States. The German government is geared throughout for the primary purpose of making war through a superlatively centralized form of control. Hitler is Commander-in-Chief, but he operates through a Chief of Staff of a Supreme Staff which plans, directs, and controls the operations of the Army, Navy, and Air Force, and is responsible only to the head of the Government. Through this machinery a campaign is planned, the organizations—air, ground, and naval—are allotted, and a Commander is designated. He organizes and trains this task force and at the appointed time carries out the campaign, with every available resource of Germany in support. He may be a ground officer, an air or a naval officer. But he is in sole charge of every phase of the operation.

"It is needless to say that the American people are not likely to establish a military oligarchy for this country. Lacking such an organization the German system would be ineffective. As a matter of fact, we have adapted to our own use a setup that approximates that of Germany as closely as is possible under our system of government.

"Just a year ago the President gave final approval to the Selective Training and Service Act and to legislation authorizing reserve components to be called into Federal service. The importance of these two measures for the national defense was tremendous. They constituted reversal of the historic and almost tragic policy that the United States would prepare for war only after becoming involved in war. Our peace-time military force was maintained for minor transactions, not to meet first-class foe:—perilous policy, and one of extreme extravagance in men and money when the emergency arose. The greatest security which this nation can possess is a powerful Navy, backed by a well-trained Army, together so strong that no foreign nation will dare to provoke a war. The Army is now in the making, but it must go through another winter of training under field conditions before it is fully prepared, and it must have the understanding and support of the people at home.

"You gentlemen are practical soldiers. You can understand the difficulty of handling large masses of men under conditions of warfare. You recognize the meaning and importance of discipline. You realize how easy it is to tear down, and how difficult it is to build it up. During this emergency the sound policies of the Legion have been a tower of strength to the War Department and to commanders in the field, and it is to you that I look for the support necessary to the accomplishment of our objective.

"The spirit and determination that were yours twenty-three years ago, in the Meuse-Argonne, at San Mihiel, or in a training camp at home, must be instilled in the men of this new Army. You can understand this and I know you will help. There is a further responsibility which I place on you. I look to you to educate the people at home as to the necessities of the times. Without a united country it will be impossible to build the type of Army we must have. We cannot build the best army in the world unless the people of this country are behind it.

"I am a soldier and I have spoken to you as one soldier to another. I have but one purpose, one mission, and that is to produce the most efficient Army in the world. Given the American type of soldier and our war industries operating at top speed; given your aggressive support on the home front, and it can be done, and it will be done in time."

Praise General Schley

High praise for Maj. Gen. Julian L. Schley and the Corps of Engineers was given this week in the House of Representatives by Representative John J. Cochran, of Missouri. He said:

"After wearing a United States Army uniform for 42 years, Julian L. Schley will soon retire from the service, having completed his term as Chief of Army Engineers. He entered the service as a cadet at West Point in 1899 and concludes his service as a major general in charge of the Corps of Engineers. During the period that he has been in the Army he has occupied almost every outstanding position where an officer of the Engineer Corps can be recognized. Following his graduation from West Point he saw service in the Philippines and Cuba and also spent four years as an instructor in engineering at the Military Academy. During the period of his career he has been Assistant Engineer Commissioner of the District of Columbia; commandant of the Engineer School at Belvoir, Va.; and was Governor of the Panama Canal Zone. The World War found him in command of the Three Hundred and Seventh Engineers overseas, and he was promoted to Chief Engineer of the Fifth Army Corps. His overseas service was recognized when he was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for his activities in the Meuse-Argonne and St. Mihiel offensives.

"Major General Schley has been in charge of the Army engineers since the present emergency arose. Heretofore the Army engineers have confined their work mostly to flood control, river and harbor, and navigation projects. So great was the task assigned to the Quartermaster Corps in charge of military construction that the President issued an order assigning part of these duties to the Army engineers. As a result of that order the engineers of the Army have been handling nearly a billion dollars in construction projects, many of which are now active. This duty imposes upon the Chief of Engineers the obligation of carrying out Air Corps building projects, as well as other Army expansion projects, and housing, and the construction of our outlying island bases. It seems to me Mr. Speaker, that we should pause for a moment to pay tribute to this outstanding Army officer who is about to leave the service.

"The engineers of the Army is one organization of which it is commonly said, 'brings value to the Government 100 cents of value for every dollar that is expended.' It has carried out the duties assigned to it without criticism and has always been considered one of the most important branches of our national defense.

"I am sure I express the sentiments of many Members of this body, who during their official career have had occasion to do business with Major General Schley, when I say that he will be missed, and I know all of them join me in extending to him our best wishes for a long and happy life and a well-deserved rest."

Benefits for Reserves

The House this week approved Senate amendments to the bill granting retirement pay and hospital benefits to certain Army Reserve officers. The bill now goes to the President for final approval. The bill originally was passed by the House last July. The Senate approved the bill, with some changes in wording, on 28 July. The full text of the measure, as now adopted, follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Reserve officers, Army of the United States, who were called or ordered into the active military service by the Federal Government for extended military service in excess of thirty days on or subsequent to 28 Feb. 1925, other than for service with the Civilian Conservation Corps, and who are now disabled from disease or injury contracted or received in line of duty while so employed, shall be deemed to have been in the active military service during such period and shall be in all respects entitled to receive the same retirement pay and hospital benefits as are now or may hereafter be provided by law or regulation for officers of corresponding grades and length of service of the Regular Army.

Sec. 2. That the duties, powers, and functions incident to the administration and payment of the benefits herein provided are hereby vested in the Veterans' Administration: Provided, That in the administration of the retirement pay provisions of the said statute the determination of all questions of eligibility for the benefits thereof, including all questions of law and fact relating to such eligibility, shall be made by the Secretary of War, or by someone designated by him in the War Department, in the manner, and in accordance with the standards, provided by law or regulations for Regular Army personnel: And provided further, That no bounty, back pay, pension, or allowance shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this Act.

THE UNITED STATES NAVY and MARINE CORPS

Conditions at Bases

neither tetanus or echinococcus infection are prevalent. It has modern cities such as Halifax, and an administration which includes a regular public health organization similar to that of one of our states or large cities. Iceland is an independent republic, the oldest in the world incidentally, and also with an enlightened and modern government. Thus, in these two places, the Medical Department of the Navy is not working in primitive countries, but with civilized and progressive communities with which they can cooperate.

Measures for the health of naval personnel in these two countries include the provision of suitable clothing and shelter to meet the climatic conditions, and hospital facilities to care for the sick and injured. The purity of food and water and of dairy products is of importance there as it is everywhere in the maintenance of health and the prevention of epidemics. Our men are well vaccinated against smallpox and typhoid fever. They are now receiving vaccination against tetanus and yellow fever.

This last disease is far removed from Iceland and Newfoundland, but it is an ever present menace in the Caribbean Islands and northern South America which lie within the endemic zone of this disease. Fortunately, again, the public health departments of the various countries have done much to prevent the breeding of the mosquito which carries yellow fever. The strict quarantine measures against this disease are made all the more necessary because of the increased communication between these countries, through the development of highways and airplane traffic. I do not believe that sufficient credit has been given to the work of many of the Pan American conferences in the development of international health measures. These meetings have usually been regarded as only political in character. Among their most important results have been mutual understandings and cooperation in regard to public health. These results do not seem as spectacular as some others, but as a matter of fact they prevent epidemics which would be both spectacular and destructive.

Malaria is a far more dangerous tropical disease than is yellow fever, for while the epidemics of the latter are very terrifying they are usually of short duration. Malaria, however, is always present. As it is a mosquito born disease many of the measures against yellow fever are applicable to the control of malaria, and the proper location of stations; the draining of swamps; the oiling of breeding places; and the screening of dwellings are effective against both diseases. The epidemiologist kills two birds with one stone when he carries out such work.

Other disease conditions most commonly encountered in the tropical areas are typhoid, dysentery, and the various types of intestinal worms. Tetanus is also a disease often seen in the tropics, and where animals have not been replaced by the automobile in transportation.

The preventive measures carried out by the medical department of the Navy include all the public health methods which can be applied. Among these, of course, is vaccination. In addition to small-pox vaccination, and typhoid inoculation, two additional vaccinations are now available and being used, one against tetanus and one against yellow fever. An additional dose of anti-typhoid vaccine is also being given to all officers and men of the Navy in order to bring their immunization to a high point.

The care of the sick and injured is dealt with by the building of dispensaries at the various stations. These dispensaries are provided with some temporary hospital facilities. For the more extensive hospitalization required Mobile Base Hospitals have been developed by the Navy. These perhaps could more properly be termed transportable hospitals as they are so arranged they can be packed up, placed on board ship, transported to an area over seas and set up and operated. Always of importance is the hospital ship, one of the most useful and necessary elements of a naval force. It is the task of the hospital ship to serve the fleet and also these over sea bases, which are really extensions of the fleet.

No details are given here on the work of the Medical Department of the Navy at the various Atlantic bases, but this gives a general view of the medical problems connected with them. It will suffice to say further that the energies of the Medical Corps of the Navy are being devoted whole-heartedly to the solution of these problems and to the task of preventing the diseases peculiar to the different localities in which the new bases are placed from affecting our personnel. In addition it provides as always medical care and hospitalization to the officers and men of the Navy on duty at stations beyond the sea.

Correct Naval Records

Representative Maas introduced a bill this week for the purpose of correcting errors or omissions in the service of retired enlisted men of the Navy. It follows:

"Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to correct errors or omissions in the computation of service of enlisted men transferred to the retired list of the Regular Navy or Marine Corps prior to the effective date of the Naval Reserve Act of 1938, as contemplated by section 202 of that Act; and shall cause to be paid to such retired enlisted men, after correction of records, allowances on the retired list as prescribed by law covering the periods for which allowances have not been paid, giving credit for prior service in the Army or other branches of the service, including periods of double time as prescribed by law and in accordance with the then prevailing practice of the Navy Department, which periods have been questioned and payments withheld by decisions of the Comptroller General, in those cases, where, through administrative error or omission, such service was not set forth in detail by the Navy Department at the time of retirement."

The USS Massachusetts, the sixth naval vessel to be assigned that name, was authorized by Congress on 27 March 1934 and the contract for her construction was awarded 15 Dec. 1938. The keel of the mighty vessel was laid on 20 July 1939.

Report on USS O-9

"That the cause of the loss of the USS O-9 cannot be determined" is an opinion arrived at by the Court of Inquiry which conducted hearings on the disaster which befell the submarine on 20 June. The court, whose proceedings, findings, opinions, and recommendations were approved by the Secretary of Navy, recommended that "no further proceedings be had in the matter."

President of the Court of Inquiry was Rear Adm. William T. Tarrant, USN, while other members were Capt. John J. Brown, USN, and Comdr. Scott Umsted, USN. Comdr. Allan R. McCann, USN, served as Judge Advocate.

After presenting complete background material in its report concerning the sinking of the USS O-9, the Court offered five opinions, followed by the recommendation that no further proceedings be had. The opinions as stated by the Court are:

"1. That the material condition of the USS O-9 was satisfactory for the prescribed deep submergence test.

"2. That the personnel of the USS O-9 was sufficiently trained to conduct the prescribed deep submergence test.

"3. That the cause of the loss of the USS O-9 cannot be determined.

"4. That it is not possible to determine whether the loss of the USS O-9 and the resulting death of the officers and crew of the vessel was caused in any manner by the intent, fault, negligence, or inefficiency of any person or persons in the Naval Service.

"5. That the death of the officers and men was incurred in line of duty and was not the result of their own misconduct."

It is to be recalled that the USS O-9 failed to rise after a deep submergence test near Portsmouth, N. H., with the resulting death of 33 officers and men. Commanding officer of the submarine was Lt. H. J. Abbott, USN.

Marine Corps Notes

Two recruiting posters, painted by outstanding artists, have been recently accepted by the Marine Corps. One by James Montgomery Flagg is entitled "The Marines Have Landed" and depicts a landing force, with troop ships, and airplanes in the background. The second poster, drawn by Lt. Col. J. W. Thomason, USMC, author and magazine writer, shows a single Marine against a red background.

As part of its program to increase enlistments, the Marine Corps is producing a series of twenty-six electrical transcriptions to be broadcast by radio stations throughout the country. The series will describe colorful events and exploits of the Marine Corps in all parts of the world. Music by the Marine band will be featured in the transcriptions.

Six second lieutenants of the Marine Corps opposed a team of six Navy Nurses in a "True or False" program which originated at the Marine Corps Barracks, Quantico, Va., on 15 Sept., and which was broadcast over a nationwide hook-up of the NBC-Blue network. Appearing on the program for the Marines were 2nd Lts. Raymond F. Aton, Frederick S. Aldridge, Thomas R. Belzer, Jesse P. Mehrlust, Leo S. Unger, and Raymond D. Wright.

To Launch USS Massachusetts

The USS Massachusetts, the fourth battleship to be launched under the capital ship expansion program, will be launched on 23 Sept. at the Bethlehem Steel Company's yard, Quincy, Mass., the Navy Department announced this week. Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, wife of the former Secretary of the Navy, has been named as the sponsor for the ship.

The USS Massachusetts, the sixth naval vessel to be assigned that name, was authorized by Congress on 27 March 1934 and the contract for her construction was awarded 15 Dec. 1938. The keel of the mighty vessel was laid on 20 July 1939.

Supply Corps Vacancies

The Navy Department announced last week that an estimated 12 vacancies in the Supply Corps, USN, for the fiscal year 1942 remain to be filled and that members of three classes of officers in the Naval Reserve have been invited to transfer to the Supply Corps for appointment to those positions. The positions are to be filled from Reserve officers who are graduates of the Naval Academy, graduates of the Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps Units, and those who are members of the Supply Corps Reserves and have at least six months' active duty credit as of 15 Sept. 1941.

Applicants for the vacancies must be between 21 and 26 years of age at the time of their appointment to the Supply Corps, which will be about 15 Dec. and must hold a Bachelor's degree from an accredited college or university.

Officers appointed in the Supply Corps will be ordered to a class of the Navy Supply School if they have not already graduated from that school. Applications for transfer to the Supply Corps must be submitted to the Bureau of Navigation by 31 Oct. and will be reviewed by a Board to be convened for the purpose of reviewing the qualifications of candidates.

Establish Magazine

The Navy Department announced last week establishment of the U. S. Naval Magazine, Rose Island, Newport, R. I. The magazine will be an auxiliary to the U. S. Naval Torpedo Station, Newport, R. I.

Beginning of Autumn

The Naval Observatory announced this week that Autumn will begin in the Northern Hemisphere, and Spring in the Southern Hemisphere, on 23 Sept. 1941, at 5:33 a. m. Eastern Standard Time.

Advance Retired Naval Officers

Representative Izac introduced a bill this week providing "that line officers of the retired list of the Navy who are on active duty on the date of the approval of this Act and who were placed upon the retired list pursuant to the Act of 3 March 1931 (46 Stat. 1482; U. S. C., title 34, sec. 286), as amended, after having failed of selection by one selection board which recommended for promotion an officer or officers junior to such retired officers, shall be advanced to the next higher grade or rank on the retired list, taking rank as of the date of retirement."

No back pay or allowances would accrue prior to the approval of the act.

U. S. COAST GUARD

PREVIOUS belief that Coast Guard officers might be immediately affected by the law which provides for the temporary appointment (promotion) of officers in the Regular Navy and Marine Corps was nullified this week by an announcement from officials at Coast Guard Headquarters who have been studying the law and its effect upon Coast Guard personnel. These officials explain that no immediate temporary promotions of regular officers of the Coast Guard will be made since Section 11b of the law states that Coast Guard officers in order to be temporarily promoted must have the same length of total commissioned service as officers of the Regular Navy.

It was pointed out this week that although the promotion to Lieutenant (jg) is made after three years' service as an ensign in both the Navy and Coast Guard, promotion to Lieutenant, Lieutenant commander and commander in the Coast Guard is made in less time than is required for corresponding grades in the Navy. Promotion in the Coast Guard to Lieutenant and Lieutenant commander is made one year before such promotions in the Navy, while that to commander is made two years more quickly in the Coast Guard.

While the junior commander in the Navy, Thomas L. McCann, was appointed as an ensign on 3 June, 1921, the junior commander in the Coast Guard, S. A. Olson, was appointed as ensign on 15 Sept. 1923, a difference of more than two years. Therefore, it is explained, the man below Commander Olson cannot be temporarily promoted under this law until an officer in the Regular Navy who was appointed as an ensign in 1923 is promoted to commander.

Section 11b, that part of the act which concerns promotion of Coast Guard officers, follows:

"See, II. The provisions of this Act, except as may be necessary to adapt the same thereto shall apply to—(b) Personnel of the Coast Guard in relationship to the Coast Guard in the same manner and to the same extent as they apply to personnel of the Navy in relationship to the Navy: Provided. That temporary appointments may be made to such rank and grade in the Coast Guard, not above captain, as correspond to the rank and grade that may be attained, either permanently or temporarily, by line officers of the Regular Navy of the same length of total commissioned service."

As the American shipbuilding industry nears realization of its pledge of two ships a day, the necessity of providing crews and officers for American vessels becomes of great importance. The Maritime Training Service, whose task it is to provide such crews and officers, is already drafting plans for an expansion of training facilities.

The oldest lighthouse in the world, Boston Light, situated on Lighthouse Island in Boston Harbor, celebrated its 158th anniversary on 14 Sept. Keeper of the historic lighthouse is Ralph Norwood, B.M., 2nd class, USCG.

Continuing to take in vessels at the rate of four or five a day, the Coast Guard Auxiliary now has 162 vessels and 786 men on active duty.

The New Tender, 113-foot class cutter Sycamore, accepted by the Coast Guard on 8 Sept., has taken its permanent station at Dubuque, Iowa.

The Coast Guard Academy football team will open its 1941 season today against Rhode Island State at New London, Conn., minus the services of two star backs. Rufe Drury, a running back, and Bobo Leach, blocking back, will watch the game from the sidelines. Drury, out for the season with a broken right ankle, will be replaced by Nick Carter or Hank Wharton, while Herb Lynch or Doc Lawrence will step into the position made vacant by Leach, who is out with a broken finger.

Interesting sidelight to this opener was an announcement from the Academy that of a total enrollment of 370 Cadets, 80 turned out for varsity football, of which only 20 were cut from the squad. Thus, almost one out of every four cadets was out for the team, and one out of every six cadets is on the varsity squad, a remarkably high percentage.

In a recent circular letter the Bureau of Navigation, Navy Department, announces instructions concerning the administration of Coast Guard enlisted personnel assigned to the Navy either aboard ship or at shore stations. These instructions state that personnel reports are to be sent direct to Coast Guard Headquarters, Washington, D. C. All requests for replacement of Coast Guard personnel by the Fleets will be forwarded to Coast Guard Headquarters by the Bureau of Navigation.

Coast Guard Headquarters will issue directly to ships and stations all directives for the advancement of its enlisted personnel on duty with the Navy. Commanding officers have been further instructed to transfer men whose enlistments are about to expire to the nearest Coast Guard Station for discharge and reenlistment, except that discharge and reenlistments may be made by Naval Ships and Stations when Coast Guard forms are available.

Enlisted personnel of the Coast Guard on duty in Coast Guard Ships and Stations assigned to operate under Navy Command will be supervised entirely by Coast Guard officials and the Bureau of Navigation will receive no reports on their activities.

We learned plenty in Singapore

If Singapore's heat and humidity are tough on white men, they're vicious on typewriters.

Bearings that operated perfectly everywhere else would swell . . . rust-resisting finishes would rust.

As a result of our Singapore experiences, today's Royal has non-corrosive hand levers, special bearings not affected by heat and humidity, and its inner parts are sprayed with rust-repelling oil.

Royal can take it—even in Singapore!

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—In the radio address the President made ten days ago, he served notice upon the Axis Powers that our Navy would fire "first" upon any Axis ship found "in any waters we deem vital to our defense." Speaking before the American Legion Convention at Milwaukee on 15 Sept., Secretary of the Navy Knox strongly upheld the action of the Greer in depth bombing the German submarine that attacked her, and declared: "Beginning tomorrow, the American Navy will provide protection as adequate as we can make it, for ships of every flag carrying Lend-Lease aid supplies between the American Continent and the waters adjacent to Iceland. These ships are ordered to capture or destroy, by every means at their disposal, Axis controlled submarines or surface raiders encountered in these waters."

The statement made by Secretary Knox clearly relates to only one part of the broad program outlined by the President. Besides the North Atlantic Lane to which the Secretary referred, there are other areas in the seven seas which are of vital interest to the United States, and which the President unquestionably had in mind when he addressed the Nation and the world. Requiring protection by us will be the routes our Lend-Lease carrying ships will use via Brazil to Monrovia, around the Cape of Good Hope to the Persian Gulf and across Iran to Russia and across the Pacific to Vladivostok, the Dutch East Indies, Singapore and Burma through which supplies will pass to Chung King. In other words, our naval activities will be far flung, and as both the President and Secretary Knox have said they will be in the form of "patrol" and "escort" until the Neutrality Law shall have been repealed when we will undoubtedly, for some areas, convoy, or participate with the British in this form of operation, and arm our merchant ships.

It is interesting to note the wide expansion which has taken place in our sea efforts, and how we have advanced from the establishment of a zone around the Americas to the proclamation of the Freedom of the Seas. First, at our instance, the Pan-American Republics joined in the Panama Agreement under which a safety zone was created reaching three hundred miles into the Atlantic and the Pacific from any American point. Subsequently this zone was enlarged to cover all the waters of the American Hemisphere, and, in addition, there were laid down specifically as of our concern, the lane of traffic across the North Atlantic to Iceland. Speaking before the House of Commons two days before the President announced his "shooting" order, Winston Churchill remarked that "the American patrol has been a help to us; I wish it might be of greater help." That stage of greater help now has been reached, and it is fair to assume that preliminary arrangements for Anglo-American cooperation were made at the Atlantic Conference.

The orders of the President will have a far reaching influence upon the course of the war. They have been well received by all the American Republics, and doubtless played their part in the action of the Argentine Legislature in adopting a resolution for the expulsion of the German Ambassador; in the arrest of German sympathizers by the Chilean Government; in the measures Colombia is taking with respect to an airfield threatening to the Panama Canal; in the protest of Panama at German sinking of the steamer Sessa, which flew the Panamanian Flag, and in the anti-Axis measures of other Republics.

The situation in the Near East is assuming importance because of the more or less reliable reports that the Axis, once winter has clamped down on operations in Russia, will move upon the Caucasus, Syria, Iraq, Iran and the Suez Canal. Concerned at German activities in Bulgaria, Russia entered a vigorous protest, which the Sofia Government answered rather belligerently; which indicates that its ports at the proper time will serve as a jumping off base for German ships, and its territory as the starting point for a likely movement via Turkey. The Ankara Government, it is now apparent, will not depart from its policy of neutrality if it can be helped, but it recognizes its danger, and fears it may have to make a choice of allies within the next few months. The threat of occupation of Teheran forced the abdication of the Shah and the elevation of his son as ruler. Iran's situation resembles that of Roumania, where Carol abdicated and was succeeded by Michael. Both of these countries are important for the same reason—their possession of oil fields.

Entering into the decision of the President to order the Navy to shoot first, also is the situation in the Far East. In his address he proclaimed that our historic policy of the freedom of the seas applies "not merely to the Atlantic but to the Pacific and to all other oceans as well." He did not mention Japan, but by his declaration he served notice that the United States would not tolerate any interference with our trade in the Western or Indian Ocean, and particularly with the supplies we are dispatching to Russia and China. Admiral Nomura, the Japanese Ambassador, does not question the determination of the President in this matter. He is continuing his effort to develop a solution of the difficulties between his country and the United States, and he has, at least, the satisfaction of delaying a show-down between them. He has discovered, despite our vigorous attitude, that there is good will on our part to promote an understanding, and he is encouraged to believe his own Government is becoming likewise animated. As proof of the change of attitude that has occurred, there were the safe passage of our tankers carrying aviation gas to Vladivostok, and the action of the Emperor in establishing an Imperial Headquarters, which will prevent Army hot heads from adopting their usual tactics of assassination and terrorism to impeach the Government to war, because by so doing they would strike a blow at the divine person of His Majesty. However, it is pointed out that a similar Imperial Headquarters was established during the Sino-Japanese war of 50 years ago, and the Russian-Japanese war of 1904-5. As regarded by competent observers, this move can have a dual object. On the one hand, it may be helpful to the growing group around the Emperor to come to an understanding with the United States. On the other, it is accepted by the Army because of the greater centralization of power for war. Whatever the correct view, the fact remains that time has been gained, and this is the factor upon which the hope of peace in the Pacific is based. Astute Japanese continue to urge their government to make no final decision until the result in Russia is known. Apparently the Army is acquiescing in this view, and in the meantime is willing for the negotiations to continue in Washington. It is reported that Hitler has manifested his displeasure at these negotiations. The view presented by his Ambassador at Tokyo is that Japan is bound by the treaty of alliance to come to the aid of the Axis Powers "when one of the three contracting powers is attacked by a power at present not involved in the European war, or in the Chinese-Japanese conflict." Japanese argue that this language enables their government to determine whether or not the United States has attacked the Axis, and that, consequently, the opinion of Germany and Italy cannot exercise any influence upon its decision. It is appreciated that the Greer, for example, employed the right of self defense in bombing the submarine that attempted to torpedo her. However, the Germans claim the Greer initiated the attack. Tokyo has decided that the incident does not justify war with us. Whether it now will hold that the United States is the aggressor in view of the orders the President has given to the Navy, remains to be seen, but the belief prevails that it will withhold action, and justify its attitude to the Axis by explaining that it will not reach a decision until a German submarine or raider is sunk by an American ship or plane, or one of our vessels is lost.

Bureau of Medicine and Surgery—Three examinations have been scheduled for candidates for appointment in the Medical Corps of the Navy as assistant surgeons and acting assistant surgeons for interne training. The examinations have been arranged by Rear Adm. Ross T. McIntire, USN, Surgeon General of the Navy, and will be held at the Naval Hospitals at Chelsea, Mass.; Newport, R. I.; Brooklyn, N. Y.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Norfolk, Va.; Charleston, S. C.; Pensacola, Fla.; Corpus Christi, Tex.; San Diego and Mare Island, Calif.; Puget Sound, Wash.; Great Lakes Ill.; Pearl Harbor, T. H.; and at the Naval Medical Center, Washington, D. C.

Examinations for appointment as Assistant Surgeons, with the permanent rank of Lieutenant (jg) are listed for 6 to 9 Oct. 1941, inclusive, and for 5 to 9 Jan. 1942, inclusive. Those for acting assistant surgeon with the probationary rank of Lieutenant (jg) are set for 5 to 9 Jan. 1942, inclusive.

Applicants for appointment as assistant surgeon are required to be citizens of the United States of over 21 but less than 32 years of age at the time of acceptance of commissioning, graduates of class "A" medical schools, to have had at least one year of interne training in a hospital accredited for interne training by the Council of Medical Education and Hospitals of the American Medical Association, and to meet the physical and other requirements for appointment. Those applying for appointment as acting assistant surgeon for interne training are required to be citizens of the United States of over 21 but less than 32 years of age, members of the junior or senior classes in class "A" medical schools, and to meet the physical and other requirements for appointment.

Acting assistant surgeons for interne training are assigned in U. S. Naval hospitals which have been accredited for interne training by the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals of the American Medical Association, and after they have completed twelve months of interne training may, if they so desire, apply for appointment as assistant surgeon in the regular Navy.

Applications for authorization to take the examinations must be in the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, Navy Department, Washington, D. C., three weeks prior to the date of the examination. Application forms for these examinations will be forwarded by that Bureau upon request.

Coast Artillery Corps—Brig. Gen. Forrest E. Williford, commanding officer of the Second Coast Artillery District, this week reviewed the 62nd CA(AA) at Ft. Totten, N. Y. General Williford presented a new streamer to be attached to the regimental standard as part of the ceremonies, while 1st Sgt. Jim Carini and Pvt. James M. Daniels received awards as winners of the Competitive Rating Award. As a result of his outstanding work, Private Daniels will be promoted to sergeant. These two were chosen from among units at Forts Dupont, Hamilton, Hancock, Tilden and Wadsworth.

Small cooking stoves for balloon barrage detachments of the Air Corps and Coast Artillery Corps have been purchased by the War Department for experimental use. Burning gasoline as fuel, the stoves are expected to provide cooking facilities for 12 to 15 men. Each stove has two burners and weighs about 10 pounds.

Infantry—Two courses of instruction for National Guard officers in the methods of conducting division schools will be started at the Infantry School, Ft. Benning, Ga. The first of the courses will be started on 13 Oct. while the second will be started at a date to be announced early in December. Subject matter of the courses will include the functions of the school operations office; the organization of the school into groups of definite responsibilities; methods of instruction, equipment, and instruction aids. Conferences are to be arranged for the purpose of discussing and advising on specific problems of individual divisions. It is contemplated that each division send two officers, a director and an assistant director or operations officer, to the course. Members of the Second, Third and Fourth Armies will attend the December course to avoid interference with maneuvers.

Officer complement of the Infantry's new Replacement Training Center at Neosho, Mo., was announced this week. Col. Otto Lange, now at Camp Wolters, Tex., who was one of the first staff officers assigned to Camp Wolters, will be executive officer of the new center. Lt. Col. R. E. Vermette, now at Camp Croft, S. C., will be Plans and Training officer and Maj. Carl Duffner, of Camp Wheeler, Ga., will be Range officer. The officers will all be assigned to the Office of the Chief of Infantry early in October for a brief training period and will then proceed to their new stations. The commanding general of the new center has not been announced.

Total enrollment in the Officer Candidates course at the Infantry School, Ft. Benning, Ga., was brought to 600 Tuesday when the third course of approximately 200 selected candidates took up studies but nearly 300 officers in two other courses were graduated on 18 Sept. A total of 200 officers enrolled in the Rifle and Heavy Weapons Company Officers' course were graduated and at the same time a class of 73 in the Officers' communications course also held graduation exercises.

Armored Force—The new camp near Ft. Smith, Ark., which will be the permanent station of the Sixth Armored Division when it is activated next spring, will be named Camp Chaffee in honor of the late Maj. Gen. Adna Romanza Chaffee, pioneer and first chief of the Armored Force. The War Department deemed it appropriate to name the home station of the Army's next tank division after the veteran officer of the old Cavalry, who, when armor returned to the modern battlefield, devoted the last years of his life to the development of the Armored Force. General Chaffee died on 22 Aug. 1941, after he had conceived and projected the expansion of the "iron cavalry" to its present stage. Construction on the new camp is just being started. It is scheduled for completion about the middle of March, 1942.

Lt. Col. E. H. Brooks, formerly assigned to the statistical section of the War Department General Staff has been assigned as artillery officer for the Armored Force, Ft. Knox, Ky.

Col. George L. King, Inf., has been relieved as liaison officer of the Armored Force and has been assigned to the Army Air Support Command with station at the Army War College, it was announced this week.

Word from Camp Polk, La., states that the new War Department ruling on an age-in-grade limit for officers on troop duty, as distinguished from administrative posts, will hit the 3rd Armored Division lightly, if at all. Average age of all General Staff, regimental and separate battalion commanding officers with the grade of colonel is 49, against the limit of 55; for lieutenant colonels, 47 is the average age with the limit of 58.

Maj. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, Jr., one of the youngest major generals in the army, is 53, while the limit for his grade is nine years away at the age of 62. Brig. Gen. Walton H. Walker, commanding general of the 3rd Armored Brigade, the tank and artillery team of the Bayou Blitz, is 52, with the age limit for his grade at 60.

Air Borne Troops—A quick-striking, hard-hitting, aerial vanguard for parachute troops, a new unit which will rely on transport plane, "Jeep" reconnaissance cars, motorcycles and bicycles for its transportation, will be added to America's new Army on 10 October. This unit, to be designated as the 88th Infantry Air Borne Battalion, will be activated at Ft. Benning, Ga., as an experimental unit preliminary to further study and changes. It is the first such unit activated within the continental boundaries of the United States.

The Battalion will be activated with a strength of about 500 officers and men, but its ultimate strength will be approximately 1,000 officers and men. Initially it will consist of a Headquarters and Headquarters Company, and four additional companies designated as A, B, C, and D. Generally the new unit will use regular Infantry equipment, however of particular interest is the fact that Company A, and Company B—the rifle companies of the battalion—will each have a platoon of bicycle troops equipped with folding bicycles. Company C will be bolstered with a platoon of motorcycle troops. Company D will be the heavy weapons company and will be armed with anti-tank and machine guns and mortars. The "Jeep"  $\frac{1}{4}$ -ton reconnaissance truck will be assigned to one of the rifle companies.

Lt. Col. Elbridge G. Chapman, Jr., who at present is an instructor in the tactical group, Infantry School at Ft. Benning, will command the new unit. Colonel Chapman commanded the 2nd Machine Gun Battalion of the 2nd Division during the World War. He has been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, Silver Star (Oak Leaf Cluster), and the Purple Heart. He is a graduate of the Command and General Staff School. Maj. Charles L. Keenan, at present an instructor in communications at the Infantry School will be the executive officer of the battalion.

The 88th Battalion will be directly under the Chief of Infantry, Maj. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges. Personnel for the new unit will be drawn from volunteers from the Infantry Replacement Training Centers at Camp Croft, S. C., and Camp Wheeler, Ga. A cadre of 50 non-commissioned officers will be supplied from the 9th Division.

As to the mission of these troops, they will bolster parachute troops wherever their landing is possible. It is noted that they follow the German version of air landing troops, even to the inclusion of bicycle troops employing folding bicycles. The success of the Germans at Crete was possible due largely to the landing of this type of troops, and it is reported that transport planes and cargo planes landed these troops and equipment in that operation at the rate of a plane every 90 seconds.

Once on the ground the troops will deploy into fighting units, the motorcyclists, "jeep" cars, and bicyclists in lightning strokes composing the advance and reconnaissance elements. These troops, it is reported, will be specifically trained and equipped for sabotage. As the advance element, they will hold also great value for flash skirmishes and raiding forays.

As Infantry officers envision the use of battalions such as this, they will land either with—or when possible without—the aid of parachute troops. Once on the land they will form into an "island" which will widen out as additional reinforcements are landed. Their motorcycles, bicycles and other equipment, including their heavy weapons will all be carried in either cargo or transport planes, and the highest specialized training these troops will have to undergo will be that of loading and unloading equipment into planes in the least possible time and training as a compact hard-hitting unit.

Army Air Forces—Maj. Gen. George H. Brett, Chief of the Army Air Corps, escorted by Air Vice Marshal G. G. Dawson, this week made a lightning tour of the desert airdromes of the Western Desert, Egypt, accompanied by his staff of American specialists. General Brett saw squadrons of Tomahawks, Glenn Martin Maryland Bombers and the fleet air arm's new Grumman Martlet fighters. He visited air officers commanding the western Egyptian desert in the underground operations room and chatted with pilots, gunners and maintenance engineers.

Before returning to Cairo, General Brett declared that "American machines seem to be standing up well under the abnormally difficult conditions out here. My job is to study need in aircraft of both this and other fronts and insure a smooth supply of ships and spare parts so that new machines are not sidetracked or delayed between American factories and the battle front."

On Tuesday of this week General Brett also inspected Empire Air Squadrons in other parts of the western desert. He talked with British, Australian, and South African pilots who express satisfaction as to American aircraft, and told them that his job was to see "that there are no obstacles between the American workshop and the British theater of operations."

The reorganization of the Army's air elements from the Army Air Corps to the Army Air Forces, a semi-independent organization, was rapidly nearing its completion this week as the Public Relations Section, Intelligence Division, was being changed over to the Public Relations Branch. This it is said is to be the last of the last office to be revamped in accordance with the shake-up of the air elements of the Army and the formation of the present unit that gives the Army Air Forces greater autonomy.

Actually what has happened in the re-organization of the Army Air Corps is simple. The old Army Air Corps has been divided into two parts; one of the parts will do the fighting and the other to look after training and supplies. The new organization has pulled out from the jurisdiction of general headquarters, and has created new branches similar to those of the War Department. The Air Forces now possess their own general staff, similar to the War Department general staff; they have their own adjutant general, air inspector, statistic and budget sections, and will operate as independently as their power allows.

The Army Air Corps, under the command of Maj. Gen. George H. Brett, will provide the Army Air Forces with pilots, personnel and planes; the Army Air Forces—which is the administrative head—will turn these planes, men and equipment over to the Air Force Combat Command, headed by Lt. Gen. Delos C. Emmons, which will do the actual fighting.

One of the whole, the change-over from the Air Corps to the Army Air Forces has been carried on so quietly and so fast that even officers of the Public Relations Section (now being changed to Public Relations Branch) have been unable to keep up with its speed. The new Army Air Forces headquarters, authorized in June now consists of the Chief of the Army Air Forces in the person of Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, and his aide de camps, Maj. Eugene H. Beebe and Maj. James Higgs; the Chief of the Air Staff, Brig. Gen. Carl S. Spaatz; the Air Staff; the Air Inspector, Brig. Gen. H. A. Dargue; and the Air Adjutant General, Lt. Col. William W. Dick. The Air Staff consists of the Secretary of the Air Staff, Lt. Col. Muir S. Fairchild; and four divisions designated as A-1, A-2, A-3, and A-4, the Air War Plans Division and the Budget Section. Col. Ralph Cousins heads the A-1 Division (personnel); Brig. Gen. Martin F. Scanlon, the A-2 Division, (military intelligence); Col. E. L. Nalden, the A-3 Division, (operations and training); Col. E. P. Sorenson the A-4 Division (Material and supply). The Air War Plans Division is in charge of Lt. Col. H. L. George and the Budget Section in charge of Lt. Col. Lee Miller. In addition the Budget Section of the Army Air Forces, also under the Secretary of the Air Staff is headed by Capt. James M. Farrar.

Nearly 1,000 men per month will be trained as Aerial Navigators during October, November and December, Lt. Col. John L. Rice, Recruiting officer of the First Corps Area has announced. The program is designed to provide commissions in the Army Air Corps to men who have failed to meet the physical requirements for Aviation Cadet pilot training.

According to the announcement, three types of applicants are acceptable educationally, according to the following priority: graduates of accredited colleges and universities who have had as a minimum, mathematics to include plane geometry, college algebra and geometry. Applicants are preferred who have had mathematics to include analytical geometry, spherical trigonometry and differential and integral calculus; those who have satisfactorily completed two years of accredited college work and who have had the above mathematics. Those accepted for the training will be appointed Aviation Cadets, non-pilot, and will receive $75 a month, in addition to other service allotments. Upon completion of the training they will be commissioned second lieutenants in the Army Air Corps Reserve.

Twenty-three soldiers of the Army Air Corps have formally enrolled in a new school for enlisted men which has been started at Windsor Locks, Conn., under the direction of the Base School Officer, Lt. Joseph T. Benedict, with teachers assigned from the Windsor Locks public schools. The purpose of the school is to qualify the enlisted men for Army flying cadet training. The instruction covers the subjects listed as included in the examination for appointment as flying cadets. All the students are from the 57th Pursuit Group and they will attend classes four nights a week, two hours per night, for two months. The men are financing the employment of the teachers from the Windsor Locks school by having $15 deducted from their pay.

Capt. Elliott Roosevelt, Spec.-Res., has taken up instruction in aerial navigation at Kelly Field, Texas. Captain Roosevelt began the navigation course on 13 Sept. Upon completion of the course on 27 Dec. he will enter the aircraft observers' course at Brooks Field, Texas. For several months Captain Roosevelt has been on active duty with the Air Corps Materiel Division at Wright Field, Ohio.

Hydrographic Office—Research and study made nearly a century ago by Lt. Matthew Fontaine Maury, of the U. S. Navy, when he headed what is now known as the U. S. Navy Hydrographic Office, is saving the lives of many mariners cast upon the mercy of the open seas by the torpedoing of ships in the Atlantic and other oceans, and is resulting in a heavy demand for Hydrographic Office charts from both England and the United States. It is now learned that the United States Maritime Commission, as a precautionary measure, has arranged within the past few days to equip the lifeboats of all of its vessels with these charts. Additional requests for the pilot charts, both from ship owners in England and those in other countries are being received at the Hydrographic Office.

Many seamen whose vessels have gone down during the present war, owe their lives to the information collected by Lieutenant Maury from the logs of men-of-war and merchantmen between 1842 and 1861. The success of these simple charts, coupled with the fact that recent attacks upon American merchantmen have brought a little closer to this country the problems of survivors of sinkings, has moved the Hydrographic Office, to make its charts available in sufficient quantities to enable all vessels to outfit their lifeboats with copies.

The charts list the average weather which can be expected, the general strength and direction of wind, the direction of ocean currents, percentage fog, tracks for sailing vessels and steamers and other information that is essential to mariners. They are published monthly by the Hydrographic Office.

Chemical Warfare Service—Maj. Gen. William N. Porter, Chief of the Chemical Warfare Service, accompanied by Brig. Gen. R. L. Very, CWS, Commanding General of Edgewood Arsenal; Col. Edward Montgomery, CWS, Chief of Field Service; and Lt. Col. J. D. Coughlan, CWS, Assistant Commandant of the Chemical Warfare School, will leave today, 20 Sept., for the Texas-Louisiana maneuvers between the Second and Third Armies.

The Second Separate Chemical Battalion at Edgewood Arsenal will shortly be activated to full strength. Headquarters Company and Company A are already on duty at Edgewood and Companies B, C, and D will be organized to form a complete battalion. The Second Separate Chemical Battalion was part of the 30th Engineers during the World War, later becoming the 1st Gas Regiment. The name was finally changed to the Second Separate Chemical Battalion.

Also to be activated and like the Second Separate Chemical Battalion to be equipped with the 4.2 inch chemical mortar is the First Battalion of the Second Chemical Regiment which will be activated at Ft. Benning, Ga. Company C of the Second Chemical Regiment is now stationed at this post and will be expanded to include Battalion Headquarters Company and Companies A, B, and D.

The 4.2 inch chemical mortar, devised by the Technical Staff of the Chemical Warfare Service, has a range of 2400 yards and is considered ideal for laying down smoke screens.

Included in the National Defense Show which begins tomorrow, 21 Sept., at the Grand Central Palace, N. Y., is an exhibit from the Chemical Warfare Service. The exhibit, prepared by the Technical Division at Edgewood Arsenal, will depict various phases of work done by the Chemical Warfare Service and will also include material on civilian defense. It is to be remembered that the Chemical Warfare Service is taking a leading role in designing plans for civilian defense in cooperation with the Office for Civilian Defense, which is headed by Mayor LaGuardia.

Now in progress at Edgewood Arsenal are a Unit Gas Officers' Course (line) and the 5th Civilian Defense class, with enrollments of 51 and 45 students respectively.

Chaplains—Attention of all chaplains has been called to a recent circular letter which states that men of the Jewish faith will celebrate their High Holy Days on Monday and Tuesday, 22 and 23 Sept. and on 1 Oct. The circular letter explains that these holidays begin at sundown on the preceding day. In so far as is practicable, soldiers will be given furlough absences on these days. Whenever furloughs cannot be granted, it is the duty of the chaplain to see that the men receive religious ministrations.

Chaplain Harry L. Virdin left the Office of the Chief of Chaplains this week to attend the 3rd Army maneuvers.

Chaplain Arthur S. Dodgson reported this week to the Public Relations Division in the Office of the Chief of Chaplains. Chaplain Dodgson was formerly post chaplain at Ft. Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

Dr. E. M. Bratcher and the Rev. Elmer Davis, representatives of the Northern Baptist Convention, recently visited Army Camps in New England to survey the needs of the Baptist Chaplains on duty in the Army Training Camps. The Baptist Representatives were formally presented to Brig. Gen. Francis B. Wilby, First Corps Area Commander, and to Maj. Gen. Thomas A. Terry, First Coast Artillery Commander.

Finance Department—Lt. Col. E. W. McLaren, FD, is acting as Assistant Chief of Finance, temporarily replacing Col. Edwin J. O'Hara, who left the Office of the Chief to assume his new duties at headquarters of the Ninth Corps Area, Presidio of San Francisco.

Maj. J. W. Dansby, FD, and Capt. A. E. Hutchison, FD, have reported to the Office of the Chief.

Medical Department—Citing figures which show that 10,250 medical officers are required to care adequately for the Army's sick, officials of the Medical Corps this week stated that only 8,450 were on active duty, pointing out that there is a deficiency of 1,800 medical officers. So acute has the problem become that The Adjutant General has issued an order which states that no medical officer will be released from service at the end of twelve months unless a suitable replacement is available. Already near the end of the list of doctors available for Army duty, the Medical Department will be forced to extend the service of doctors now on duty past the twelve-month period.

Officials explain that it may be also necessary to suspend deferments of doctors who are connected with the Public Health Service, with municipal health administration, and with other organizations, in order to bring the strength of officers in the Medical Department to requirements for proper care of the Army.

A source of concern has been the declining of appointments of more than 100 doctors over 28 years old who had previously expressed a desire to serve in the Medical Corps. Because the law now states that no one 28 years or older is affected by Selective Service, these doctors have ignored requests of the Medical Corps that they go on active duty with the Army and have continued in private practice.

In order to foster closer social and professional relations among Medical Department officers residing in and near Washington, Surgeon General (Maj. Gen.) James C. Magee has announced that monthly meetings of these officers will be held at 8 P. M. at the Sternberg Auditorium, Army Medical Center, on the third Monday of each month from October to May, inclusive. The program for each of these meetings will be made up of three parts, first of which will be a talk, a demonstration, a clinic, or the presentation of a paper; the second, a discussion period, to be followed by a social hour during which refreshments will be served. Distinguished leaders of the medical profession are being invited to address these meetings, while other invitations have been sent to civilian doctors and government health officials.

Lt. Col. Eugen G. Reinartz, M. C. post surgeon at Scott Field, Ill., has been chosen to head the School of Aviation Medicine at Randolph Field, Tex. Colonel Reinartz, who will leave Scott Field on 23 Sept., will be succeeded by Lt. Col. Louis M. Field, MC, post surgeon at Lowry Field, Denver, Col.

Corps of Engineers—What is thought to be the largest tactical heavy ponton bridge in United States military history was constructed at Montgomery, La. across the Red River last week by the 87th Engineer Battalion for the use of the Second Armored Division. The 525-foot structure was thrown across the broad stream in the net time of six hours, with assistance from the division's own 17th Engineers. Notable in the project was the fact that the construction of the bridge, and the passage over it by the Second Armored Division were begun and completed according to a schedule set 24 hours in advance and 40 miles away. The 87th had to travel much farther than that to find roads that could support the huge pontoons and their prime movers. Maj. Gen. George S. Patton told Maj. Gen. G. Shingler and his battalion that the project was the fastest and finest piece of military engineering he had ever seen. The bridge made it possible for the Second Armored to thrust its tanks and half-tracks into the rear of the Red enemy lines and end the problem being conducted by the Third Army.

Field Artillery—Construction of the Butner Equestrian Stadium at Ft. Bragg, N. C., has been completed, according to word from that post, but due to the proximity of the maneuver period and the departure of all animal units in the near future, the dedication exercises and opening horse show will be postponed until after maneuvers. The stadium, which is named after and dedicated to the late Maj. Gen. Henry W. Butner, former President of the Field Artillery and Post Commander at Ft. Bragg, contains 10 Hunter Type obstacles and 10 Jumper Type obstacles, all of permanent construction. These obstacles are scientifically designed so that an infinite number of courses can be planned without moving any equipment. Other installations include boxes, grandstand, judges stand, refreshment stand, paddock, warehouse and rest rooms. The arena proper is designed primarily for horse shows and exhibitions.

Maj. Gen. Robert M. Danford, Chief of Field Artillery, returned to Washington 12 Sept. after spending a very interesting and instructive month in England, observing military activities and developments there.

Contrary to an announcement from Washington in which were cited the few remaining horse drawn artillery battalions, word from Ft. Bragg, N. C., assures that the 6th Field Artillery Battalion is definitely horse drawn and definitely exists. Under the present command of Lt. Col. Harold W. Blakeley, the battalion forms an integral part of field artillery at Ft. Bragg. Disproving the purported theory that horse drawn artillery should be entirely replaced by motorized units, the Sixth is furnishing active evidence that horse drawn artillery will remain an essential element, says the Ft. Bragg announcement. The organization maintains a reputation for rapid and silent occupation of position, particularly under the cover of darkness, it is stated. Further, it excels in maneuverability over difficult terrain, and in efficient fire support.

Orders have been issued assigning Maj. Alfred M. Gruenthal, FA, to Headquarters Third Army. Major Gruenthal will be Deputy Chief of Staff of the Third Army.

FM 6-40 "Field Artillery Firing" is under revision and publication is expected early in 1942. Development of methods at Field Artillery School, which has prompted this revision has also caused a revision of Field Artillery Book 161 which is used by R.O.T.C. units. In order to bridge the gap until the publication of the revised FM 6-40 and FA Book 161, the War Department has approved the publication of Instruction Memorandum G-12 "Fires Based on Accurate Data: Massed Fires," which will later be embodied in these two publications. The matter contained in Instruction Memorandum G-6 has been embodied in G-12; the former will therefore be revoked upon publication of the latter.

Quartermaster Corps—The War Department has announced that a Quartermaster Depot will be built approximately three miles west of Alexandria, Va., on the Southern Railway line. The depot, original site for which will be utilized for construction of the new War Department building, will occupy 168.48 acres of land and will have approximately 500,000 square feet of storage facilities. Contracts for this construction have not as yet been awarded.

During the next three months, 3,110 horses and 140 mules will be purchased by the Quartermaster Corps for use by Cavalry and Field Artillery units. A maximum of $100 is allowed for light riding horses, while horses in all other classes will average approximately $165. Mules will cost the Army $175. Total cost of this procurement program, under the direction of the Remount Service, will be about $533,850.

Completion next month of a clothing and equipment repair shop at Ft. Ord, Calif., and another clothing renovating plant at the Ogden General Depot, Utah, will aid greatly in keeping Army clothing, shoes, tentage, and bed clothing in good condition in the Ninth Zone Area. The Ogden General Depot repair plant, largest of its kind west of the Mississippi, will cost $399,600, and is scheduled for completion on 15 Oct.

Maj. Richard W. Sears, Bureau of Public Relations, War Department, bought a pair of shoes from the Quartermaster Depot in Boston in Sept., 1919. He's still wearing them! The shoes, which cost Major Sears about $10.00, have never been half-soled, although the heels were once leveled, and several pairs of shoe laces have been replaced. Major Sears has worn these shoes on all his tours of duty; for three months while making the picture "Life of Riley"; during maneuvers; in American Legion parades; in water, mud, and sunshine. A punster slyly added, "Wonder if that is sole proof of outstanding Quartermaster purchases?"

Ordnance Department—Figures released this week by the War Department reveal that machine gun production has increased 460% since August, 1940, and that all ten machine gun manufacturing facilities required for present estimated needs are now in operation.

Eight private plants placed under contract last year, in addition to one private plant already making machine guns at that time, and one manufacturing arsenal operated by the Ordnance Department at Rock Island, Ill., are all turning out machine guns for use by the Army.

These manufacturing facilities are producing either or both .30 and .50 caliber machine guns to be mounted in aircraft, in tanks, in armored vehicles, and for use in other components of our armed forces.

Small arms ammunition production will begin this month at the new St. Louis Ordnance Plant, St. Louis, Mo., several weeks ahead of schedule. Production will also begin ahead of schedule at the Denver Ordnance Plant, Denver, Colo., while a third small arms ammunition plant, Lake City Ordnance Plant, Independence, Mo., began manufacture early in August.

A fixed-fee contract was awarded this week to the E. I. duPont de Nemours and Co., Wilmington, Del., for architect and engineer services, construction services, acquisition and installation of equipment, option for training key personnel and operation of the Oklahoma Ordnance Works, Choteau, Okla.

The overall estimated total of this contract is $84,235,594, which includes construction and equipping of the plant and one year's production of smokeless powder and diphenylamine.

Army War College—Activities at the Army War College this week included three lectures and the presentation of problems 12, 13, 14, 15, and 16, which are concerned with a study of the aeronautical, automotive, steel, communications, and heavy chemical industries, respectively. Mr. Charles B. Henderson, chairman, Reconstruction Finance Corporation, spoke to students on "Strategic Materials"; Mr. K. T. Keller, president, Chrysler Corporation, spoke on "Current Problems of the Automotive Industry"; while Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., Regent, Georgetown University, concluded the week's lectures with an address on "Current Economic and Social Situation in Europe."

Graduation exercises at the College will be held on 29 Sept., with Under Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson scheduled to deliver the principal address.

Nurses—As the expansion program of the Army is broadened by the retention of selectees and National Guardsmen, it becomes increasingly necessary that additional nurses be brought into active service. At the present time, there are 6,149 nurses on active duty, of which 4,798 are reserves and 1,351, regulars. It is the aim of officials of the Army Nurse Corps to reach full authorized strength, 8,237 by 31 Dec. These officials explain that an increase in nurses volunteering for Army service is expected after 1 Oct., when nurses in civilian hospitals who have been filling in for staff nurses away on vacation, are replaced.

Ordered to duty in Puerto Rico, five nurses, led by Lt. Lilimae Willkie, ANC, cousin of former Presidential candidate Wendell L. Willkie, will leave their present station at Ft. Bragg, N. C., and sail from New Orleans on 26 Sept. Other nurses to be transferred from Ft. Bragg for service in Puerto Rico are Lts. Ann Karpik, Theresa Marody, Thelma Williams, and Elizabeth Sullivan.

It was held at the Commandant's quarters on Saturday, sixteen August, at eight o'clock.

Over two hundred Naval, Coast Guard, and Army Officers with their families and civilian friends attended. Those wishing to play bridge arranged their own tables, and, for those wishing to play bingo, a huge table was set up on one of the porches. Others wandered about the major part of the evening squandering their dimes and quarters.

Most gratifying were the splendid cooperation and support given by the Navy, Coast Guard, Army, and leading citizens of Key West. The local merchants contributed graciously with attractive prizes and gifts. Hardly a person left the party without a gift of some sort. There was a prize for each table of bridge and a great number of door prizes. One of the money-making features of the evening was a donated cake sale. Socially and financially the party met with the highest expectations.

Announcement is made of the birth at San Francisco, Calif., on 10 Sept. 1941, of a son to Dr. and Mrs. George W. Waldron, of Houston, Texas. Mrs. Waldron is the former Miss Rosalind Deakyne, daughter of Brig. Gen. Herbert Deakyne, USA, ret., and Mrs. Deakyne.

OBITUARIES

Capt. John R. Hornberger, (SC) USNR, secretary-treasurer of the Navy Mutual Aid Association, died this week at the Naval Hospital, Washington, D. C. Interment will be at Santa Barbara, Calif. Captain Hornberger is survived by his widow, Mrs. Olive L. Hornberger, Washington, D. C.

His service at sea included tours of duty aboard twelve vessels, while his extensive shore duty placed him at various times in Japan, Hawaii, at Cavite, P. I., Yokohama, Japan; Naval Station, Hawaii; Navy Yards at League Island, Calif.; Puget Sound, Wash.; Mare Island, Calif.; Washington, D. C.; and Philadelphia, Pa.; the Naval Supply Depots at the Naval Aircraft Factory, Philadelphia, Pa.; and Naval Operating Base, Portsmouth, Va.; and the Naval Air Stations at San Diego, Calif., and Lakehurst, N. J.

After 30 years service, Captain Hornberger was, as his own request retired on 1 Aug. 1936, the date on which he assumed the duties of secretary and treasurer of the Navy Mutual Aid Association.

Captain Hornberger felt that an assessment organization, that not only paid the benefit, but also returned part of the reserve on the death of a member, as the Navy Mutual Aid Association was doing, faced an inevitable fate. Therefore as a result of Captain Hornberger's efforts, a maximum benefit of $9,000 was established, thus assuring all members of the Association of equal assessments, and furthering the security of the organization. He also, during his five years of secretary-treasurer, placed the Association on a level premium basis for a benefit of $7,500 paid up at varying ages.

In a statement issued upon Captain Hornberger's death, the Navy Mutual Aid Association said:

"Captain Hornberger's death is a great loss to the Navy as a whole and to the Navy Mutual Aid in particular. The splendid work he did, his unselfish, understanding nature, and his keen sense of humor will long be remembered by all who had the privilege of knowing him."

The Navy Department announced this week that in compliance with the wishes of his widow, the ashes of the late Capt. Sherwood Pickling, USN, killed 1 Sept. 1941, in the crash of an R.A.F. Ferry Command plane, are to be scattered from a Naval vessel on Casco Bay, Maine.

A submarine, the type of vessel in which Captain Pickling served for a large portion of his career in the Navy, will be designated as the vessel to participate.

Simple non-military memorial services, conducted by a local Minister, will be held in Mrs. Pickling's residence, which overlooks Casco Bay.

The ashes were sent from England on 10 Sept. 1941, after funeral services in Glasgow, Scotland, on 6 Sept. 1941, and memorial services at St. Martin-In-The-Fields Church, Trafalgar Square, 8 Sept. 1941.

It is expected that the services at the Pickling residence, Falmouth Foreside, R. F. D. 4, Portland, Me., will be held within a week's time and the Commandant of the First Naval District has been authorized to cooperate with Mrs. Pickling in arranging the rites.

Comdr. John James Patterson, 3rd, USN, died 13 Sept., at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, following a brief illness. At the time of his death he was a member of the U. S. Naval Mission to Brazil.

Commander Patterson is survived by his widow, Mrs. Rhueybelle Alter Patterson, who is in Rio de Janeiro; also by two children, John James Patterson, 4th, and Gay Isabelle Patterson.

Born in Millington, Pa., 14 June 1896, Commander Patterson attended public schools in Millington, the Lewiston Preparatory School, and then entered the U. S. Naval Academy from the Seventh Pennsylvania District. He was graduated from the Academy with the class of 1919. While there he was active in football and track.

During the World War he served with the Cruiser Force, Atlantic Fleet, in the USS America, and in the USS Corsair at Brest, France. In 1919 he was assigned successively to the Receiving Ship, New York, the USS Connecticut, and in 1920 was advanced to Lieutenant, (Jg). Following service aboard the USS Pyro and USS Arizona he was promoted to Lieutenant in 1922.

For the following nine years he saw duty at San Diego, at the U. S. Naval Academy, and in the USS Hubert. In 1931 he was ordered to command the USS Quail and in 1933 was appointed aide and flag secretary on the staff of the Commander, Minecraft, Battle Force. He was also advanced to the rank of Lieutenant Commander that year.

Ordered in 1934 to the Bureau of Navigation,

Navy Department, he served in 1936 aboard the USS Indianapolis as gunnery officer. Subsequently he reported for duty in the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations, Navy Department, and on 13 February 1939 was advanced to the rank of Lieutenant Commander.

to 1st lieutenant in each component requires the same three years' service.

"Since the emergency, with the expansion of the Army to approximately five times its 1940 strength, certain steps have been taken to provide temporary promotions for worthy Regular Army officers. In the troop basis under the existing expansion program there are positions in the Regular Army for approximately 1,300 promotion-list colonels. In the early part of this year there were only about 650 officers of that grade. Late in June, 214 lieutenant colonels on the promotion-list were advanced to full colonelcies, and two weeks later it was announced that 436 more would be promoted to fill the remaining vacancies. All of these lieutenant colonels, who are promoted on the merit basis, have not as yet been selected. The next list of temporary promotions to colonel is expected to be announced shortly.

"Reserve officers on extended active duty may be granted permanent promotions to and including the rank of major, under certain conditions. They must have obtained a certificate of capacity and have completed the prescribed time in grade. They must have served six months or more on their current tour of extended active duty. Appropriate vacancies or assignments must exist, and action toward promotion must originate with the officer's unit commander and be forwarded to the War Department through command channels.

"The names of all Reserve 1st and 2nd lieutenants who are considered qualified for and are recommended for promotion to the next higher grade will be reported to the War Department not later than 1 Oct. 1941.

"Revised policies governing promotion of National Guard officers on active duty will be announced shortly."

lives during the Chinese revolution. He held the Victory Medal and Transport Clasp, World War, and the Yangtze Service Medal.

Brig. Gen. William S. Scott, USA-Ret died at his home, 733 Grayson St., San Antonio, Texas, 31 Aug. 1941.

He was born in McKinney, Texas, 12 Jan. 1856, the son of Col. Thomas Morton Scott, veteran of the Mexican and Civil Wars, and Elizabeth Matilda (Sherley) Scott.

He was graduated from the U. S. Military Academy in 1880, the Infantry and Cavalry School in 1887 and the Army War College in 1908. Upon graduation from West Point, he was commissioned a second Lieutenant in the 1st Cavalry, and was identified with this regiment for thirty-one years of his military career.

He served successively in all grades to the rank of Brigadier General. He participated in one Indian Campaign and two major wars, the Spanish-American and the World War.

Successively, he was engaged as follows between 1880 and 1920, when he retired:

Secretary, Infantry and Cavalry School, 1890-94; adjutant of Regiment, 1894-98; in field with Army Headquarters, as assistant adjutant general, Cuban and Puerto Rican campaigns; Lieutenant colonel, 44th Volunteer Infantry, Philippine Islands, 1899-1901; recommended for brevet brigadier general of Volunteers for suppressing insurrection and securing surrender of insurgents; colonel and assistant chief of Philippine Constabulary, 1903-07; in Philippine Islands with Regiment, 1909-10; adjutant general, Department of Texas, 1910-13; adjutant, 1st Cavalry Brigade, and in charge of militia affairs of Southern Department, 1913-16; organized and commanded 16th Cavalry, 1916-17; commanded Officers' Training Camp, Leon Springs, Texas, 1917; commanded 59th Infantry Brigade, Camp Sevier, South Carolina, and also part of the time 30th Division while in training, 1917; promoted to brigadier general, 1917; in France, commanding Base Section 2, with headquarters at Bordeaux, December, 1917, to August, 1918; commanded 41st Division in France, August 10, to November, 1918; commanded Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia, and demobilization center there, December 19, 1918, to November 1, 1919; commanded Fort Sam Houston, Texas, November, 1919, to retirement by operation of law on January 12, 1920.

Entitled to following campaign and service badges: Gold Medalist, Army Team; Indian Wars; Spanish-American War; Philippine Island Insurrection; Puerto Rican Occupation; Cuban Occupation; Mexican Border; and World War. He was awarded Medal of Honor as an officer in the Philippine Constabulary, and was an officer de la Legion d'Honneur, France, 1919.

Upon his retirement General Scott made San Antonio, Texas, his home. In August, 1929, he assisted in the organization of the Sam Houston State Bank and Trust Company, of which he then became vice-president and director, and in 1932 was chosen president. In 1932, he resigned the presidency and became chairman of the board of directors. Shortly after his resignation as president, this bank was nationalized under the name of the National Bank of Fort Sam Houston.

He was a member of the military affairs committee of the Chamber of Commerce of San Antonio.

On November 30, 1887, General William S. Scott married Nelle Zee Hastings (now deceased), a daughter of Stuart Hastings, of Leavenworth, Kansas. He is survived by his only daughter, Kathleen Hastings Scott, who married Col. Gordon R. Catts, USA, now stationed at Newark, N. J., with the Organized Reserves; and his grandson, 1st Lt. Gordon R. Catts, Jr., Engineers, stationed in Atlanta, Georgia.

The services, conducted by Chaplain L. D. Miller, were held from his home on Wednesday afternoon, 3 Sept. The active pall bearers were a group of men of the First Training Camp at Leon Springs, Texas in 1917. A number of his old friends, as well as additional men from the Training Camp, acting as honorary pall bearers, lined each side of the walk as he was borne from his home. He was buried at the National Cemetery of Fort Sam Houston, where, at his request, only a firing squad and a bugler took part in the military ceremony.

Signal Corps Notes

An identification unit of the 161st Signal Photographic Company, Ft. Benning, Ga., headed by 2nd Lt. James A. Castellaw, SC, left Saturday, 13 Sept., for the Louisiana maneuver area, while two other units left this week for the forthcoming Carolina maneuvers.

The unit in the Louisiana area is completely equipped to take hundreds of identification photographs of individuals in the maneuver area. The unit will work with a laboratory crew in the processing of the photographs.

A laboratory unit commanded by 1st

Lt. John N. Harman, SC, left Ft. Benning for Camden, S. C., where it will participate in the First Army maneuvers. Accompanying this unit will be a general assignment unit of the 161st Signal Photographic company, commanded by 1st Lt. Michael Carlo, SC.

On recommendation of the Defense Communications Board, through its Aviation Communications Committee, the Federal Communications Commission has withdrawn the frequency 3105 kilocycles from use by scheduled aircraft and substituted the frequency 3117.5 for such use. This action, prompted by congestion of 3105 kilocycles and communication needs for off route flights of aircraft in connection with defense, necessitates the withdrawal of the frequency 3120 kilocycles from availability for assignment to aircraft. However, the latter is little used at the present time and the private flyer will benefit materially by now having exclusive use of 3105 kilocycles. The change does not involve modification of existing aircraft licenses.

Reports Navy's Progress

Declaring that no nation in human history has ever equalled the record in productivity that the United States has made in the past year, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, speaking before the Annual Convention of the American Legion at Milwaukee, Wis., on Monday promised that America's two-ocean Navy will be completed far ahead of 1946—the date estimated for its completion at the outset of the expansion program.

"I cannot give you actual figures because that is a military secret," Knox told the Legionnaires, "but when the time comes when the story can be written of what has been done in production, in the last year, to provide the means to defend America, it will constitute one of the brightest pages to be found in American history—a page of which every American will always be proud."

Outlining the progress made toward the creation of a two-ocean Navy, Knox said: "For achievement of this purpose, awards have been made for the construction of 332 combatant ships. The building of these vessels, which will cost about $6,000,000,000, added to what we already possess, will give us a combined sea strength of 32 battleships, 18 aircraft carriers, 91 cruisers, 364 destroyers and 186 submarines, a total fleet of 691 vessels of war.

"Incomparably, this will be the greatest sea power with air power auxiliary ever created by any nation in the history of the world.

"At the outset of the program, it was estimated that it could not be given full effect before 1946. I shall not attempt to tell you how much short of that time the objective will be realized, but I do dare to say to you that the whole fleet will be completed far ahead of schedule, and that every ship coming into commission is going into service months ahead of the scheduled time.

"Before the end of 1941, we will have added to the fleet, commissioned and ready for service, two battleships, one aircraft, 18 destroyers and 10 submarines."

Knox added that the Naval air arm is admittedly the best in the world, and said: "Part of the reason why it is the best in the world has been because it has been trained specifically to serve with the fleet. It was our Navy which produced the first, and still the best, dive bomber in the world. It was our Navy which brought the airplane carrier to its highest state of perfection. It was our Navy which created and developed the long range patrol bomber—flying boats. We have made tremendous progress in expanding the aeronautical service of the Navy. Aircraft are coming to us now in significant numbers and in every category. They are proving to be equal or the superior to any that are produced in the world. These types have become so effective because they have been designed and operated as a part of the Navy. They must never be regarded as other than a part of the Navy."

As to auxiliaries Knox adds, "While we are building combatant ships, we likewise have been building auxiliaries. This year of 1941 will have seen added to the fleet 84 vessels of this type, to give us a total of 258 ships in such varied classifications as submarine tenders, ammunition ships, oilers, hospital ships and transports.

"In addition, we are constructing a swarm of small patrol boats and district vessels—submarine chasers, torpedo boats, coastal minesweepers, fuel barges and so forth. We will add almost 500 of these to our Navy during 1941, to give us a total strength in these classifications of about 1,130 craft."

The commissioned personnel of the Navy will be expanded nearly by 100,000, he said. "At the beginning of 1941, there were 210,400 commissioned officers and enlisted men of all classifications in the service. By the end of 1941, their numbers will be increased to 303,500. Each month sees more than 10,000 new men wearing the uniform of the United States Navy."

Honor General Pershing

General John J. Pershing, General of the Armies of the United States, was honored last Saturday at an informal birthday celebration at his apartment at Walter Reed Hospital where he is undergoing a routine check-up.

Highlight of the occasion was the presentation to General Pershing of a birthday greeting, signed by General George C. Marshall and the chiefs of the various branches of the General Staff and presentation of birthday greeting from Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson. Col. W. B. Smith, secretary of the General Staff who made the presentation for General Marshall who was unable to attend, gave General Pershing the greetings which were written on parchment and wrapped in sheepskin.

The affair, which was informal was climaxed with the cutting of a huge birthday cake prepared for the occasion. Music was furnished by the Army band.

Among those attending were: Brig. Gen. Shelle Y. Marietta, Assistant to the Surgeon General, who planned the party, Col. William L. Keller, Col. G. E. Adamson, Military Secretary to the General of the Armies; Col. W. B. Smith, Secretary of the War Department General Staff; Col. Lynn I. Jones, and Col. John Callan O'Laughlin.

During the day, many of the General's friends stopped by to pay their respects.

"Current Spanish"

"Current Spanish," by José Martínez, published by the Paulist Press, 401 West 59th Street, New York City.

"Current Spanish," as the title implies, is a practical and simplified textbook designed to meet the needs of the student who wishes to acquire a speaking knowledge of the language without delving into the intricacies of its grammar.

The author is one of our ablest teachers of modern languages and a recognized authority on his native tongue. His present position as Instructor of Spanish at the United States Military Academy has given him a keen concept of the Army's requirements. This textbook is unique because, in addition to a complete compilation of modern conversational material, it contains military terminology which would be difficult to find in any other work.

Anyone familiar with the contents of this small volume should be able to converse naturally and correctly in modern Spanish, avoiding the stilted, artificial style so common to the student of a foreign language. Languages change through common usage, so "written Spanish" differs considerably from the current spoken version. This attractive little pocket-style edition should thus be an invaluable reference book for the scholar who is making a comprehensive study of Spanish, as well as for the beginner with limited time to devote to the subject.

FINANCE

Financial Digest

The new tax bill has become law, and from the incomes of 13,175,000 taxable persons, the Treasury will draw during the next fiscal year an additional estimated $3,553 billions, and perhaps $4 billions, to meet in part National Defense expenditures. From this and existing laws, the Government will collect the all high total of over $13 billions. Colossal as this sum appears, it is slightly more than half of the estimated disbursements, and falls short by more than $2 billions of the initial Treasury plan to pay out of taxes, two-thirds of defense operating expenses. To tighten up loopholes in the law, Congress will pass another tax measure at this session. This will deal with "administrative" provisions, and is expected to raise an additional $250 millions. The Treasury and the Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee have announced that another tax bill will be enacted at the session beginning in January, and will deal among other matters, with Life and Fire Insurance Companies and concerns, which hitherto have enjoyed what is claimed to be relative tax immunity. It is the view of the Treasury that the huge government expenditures will greatly increase civilian and corporation individual incomes, and that, consequently, no hardship will be suffered from the operation of the tax laws.

In his discussion of the threat of inflation included in the speech he made in Boston last week, Secretary Morgenthau mentioned the new taxes as one of the features of the Administration's program to avoid this evil. However, a study of the tax law, comprehensive as it appears to be, shows it yet fails to affect materially the majority of wage earners. This is not the view of Labor's Non-Partisan League, which charges "harsh treatment of low income groups," and which insists there should be heavier taxation not upon such groups, but upon large incomes, gifts and estates, and excess profits. Congressional economists are arguing that unless these groups be forced to pay their share of the taxes, they will have available comparatively large means for the purchase of luxury goods, and their use will increase the rapidity of the rising spiral of prices. It seems to be the opinion of the Administration that a "little" inflation is desirable, and that in any case the tax bill to be passed next year can make provision to aid in arresting this movement. A valuable feature of the new law is authority for the creation of a Joint Committee of Congress, on which will sit the Secretary of the Treasury and the Director of the Budget, to study means and methods of slashing non-defense expenditures. This provision is regarded by the New Dealers as aimed at social welfare and other policies of their particular interest, but they are accepting it because of the necessity of putting into effect on 1 October the increased excise taxes imposed. However, it is worth noting that the law carries the implied promise of no more enactments to raise the cost of living and the cost of Government by "freezing" surpluses, or voting pork-barrel bills, or special interest proposals.

The small business manufacturers are continuing to demand that Congress afford relief in the matter of materials from which they have been cut off by priorities. They are charging that the Army and Navy have made inflationary estimates of their needs, and thus are unnecessarily denying supplies to non-defense plants and precipitating unemployment. Last week meetings of these manufacturers occurred in Indianapolis and Chicago, and attending were members of Congress, Mayors and Labor Leaders. In Washington, the SPAB and OPM gave small comfort to the protesters. The former disapproved the Gulf-to-Atlantic oil pipe line, and all non-defense construction, including the proposal of the Eastman Kodak Company to expand its plastics factory at Kingsport, Tenn., although by such expansion the product would replace some 8,000,000 pounds of aluminum, 34,000,000 pounds of zinc and other materials. The OPM limited to 204,848 the output of passenger cars in December, as against 396,531 units produced in December 1940. It is the plan of the government production agencies to convert civilian factories into defense producers, and this will be possible, it is claimed, when there shall be completed the inventory of the materials, machinery and labor required for defense, Lend-Lease and civilian consumption.

Defense of Naval Districts

Progress of the Naval Districts Division, headed by Rear Adm. Alexander Sharp, USN, was outlined this week by Secretary of the Navy Knox at his press conference. The Naval Districts Division of the Office of Naval Operations is charged with the organization and military administration of the Naval Districts in matters concerning the shore establishment, shore facilities or public works, where military considerations are involved; liaison with the Army and the newly formed Office of Civilian Defense; liaison with the Army and other Federal agencies concerning the Navy's interests in Rivers and Harbors projects, harbor regulations, pier head lines; acquisition and disposal of property by lease, sale, permit or transfer; and correspondence with members of Congress, other Government Departments and organizations and private individuals, covering officers of land or sites for naval purposes.

The Division also maintains close relations with the Coast Guard, which in time of war would become part of the Navy, although it would not lose its identity. In their planning of the defense of the coast line, Commandants of Naval Districts are always in close and intimate touch with the Army Commanders and Coast Defense commands.

The Bureau of Navigation has during the past year established schools in various Naval Districts to train officers in local defense. Already in operation are two schools for Local Defense Forces, located in the First Naval District and at Treasure Island, Calif.; a Listening School on each Coast; a Net Schools at the Net Depot, Tiburon, Calif., and at Newport, R. I.; while a Mine Warfare School was established at Yorktown, Va.

The Navy Department has developed plans for placing nets at the entrances of the important harbors of the United States and its possessions, where this type of defense is applicable. Net depots have already been established on the East and West Coasts, for the storage of this type of material. Men and facilities have been trained and acquired for the laying of these nets should the need arise.

To supplement the laying of Army mines, the Navy Department has devised plans for the defense of the Naval Districts by use of mines, while a mine warfare school has been established at Yorktown, Va. The Navy is pursuing a policy of training by doing, and is conducting practice in the laying of mines along both coasts.

To support vessels of the Naval Local Defense Forces, the Navy Department is constructing section bases, each about 40 acres, providing barrack accommodations for a base complement of about 100 men and berthing, fueling, repair and upkeep facilities for about ten small vessels. Of an original 30 bases authorized, 18 are now in service, and the remainder will be commissioned before 1942.

During July, 27 additional bases were authorized, bringing the total to 57. These bases will be distributed on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, in Alaska, in the Gulf of Mexico, in the West Indies, in the Panama Canal, in Hawaii, and in the Philippines, all this designed to adequately protect the coasts of continental United States and its possessions against attack.

MERCHANT MARINE

Merchant Marine

Rear Adm. Adolphus Andrews, Commandant Third Naval District and Commander North Atlantic Naval Cost Frontier, announced this week that the Navy Department has completed arrangements to use seventeen merchant marine vessels to supply ships running between American ports and the various Naval bases outside the continental limits of the United States.

The ships have been acquired under a time charter, and will sail with their regular civilian crews. Operations, however, will be directed by Capt. F. G. Reinicke, USN-Ret., Port Director, New York, N. Y., under direction of the Commandant, Third Naval District.

Several of these ships have already been put into service, while the remaining vessels will begin their new job in the very near future. Names of the ships chartered by the Navy are: Norwalk, Merrimack, Roanoke, Lake Oswego, City of Dallas, Northern Swock, Providence, Oneida, Lake Ormac, Ozark, Wichita Falls, York, City of Fort Worth, Norlantic, Norlavore, Falmouth, and Sandwich.

Middle Atlantic District

The Maritime Commission announced the creation of a Middle Atlantic District comprising the area north of Hampton Roads to and including the Delaware River area, with headquarters at Baltimore, Md. It was pointed out that a number of employees of the Commission had been engaged in activities in Baltimore in connection of marine surveys, vessel repairs, vessel inventories, and similar duties, who have been carried on either the Washington, New York, or Norfolk payrolls. The new organization will provide closer supervision of these activities and at the same time will provide a local centralized office arrangement for the handling of administrative routine.

Less than one month after President Roosevelt signed the Supplementary Appropriations Bill on 25 Aug., the Maritime Commission has signed contracts with the Gulf Shipbuilding Corp., Mobile, Ala., for construction of 14 cargo vessels of a modified C-2 type. The vessels will be built as part of the Commission's expanded defense program calling for production of 563 additional merchant carriers, made possible by the supplemental appropriations.

The 14 vessels, first of which is to be delivered on 1 Sept. 1942, and the last on 31 Dec. 1943, will cost $2,500,000, and will have an overall length of 459 feet and breadth of 63 feet, with a deadweight tonnage of 8,656 tons. The Maritime Commission stoutly maintains that this type vessel is the most economical and efficient vessel of its class in the world.

Ship Construction

The Maritime Commission will negotiate with five yards contracts for construction of nine single-screw cargo "coasters" each. Bids for these vessels were opened 15 July, but were rejected as excessive prices on a fixed fee basis ranging from $1,324,000 to $1,443,000.

It is expected that under negotiated contracts the 45 vessels can be obtained for an average of $950,000 each.

Contracts with the Lake Superior Shipbuilding Co., Superior, Wisc.; the Leatham Smith Coal and Shipbuilding Co., Sturgeon Bay, Wisc., and the Pacific Bridge Co., San Francisco, will be negotiated on a cost-plus-minimum-fee basis. Contracts with the Odenbach Shipbuilding Corp., Rochester, N. Y., and the Basalt Rock Co., Napa, Calif., will be on a lump-sum basis.

The coasters will be of 2,800 dead-weight tons, 258 feet 9 inches long.

Shipping and the War

R. G. Banks, of the Intercoastal Steamship Freight Association, has been appointed to the staff of the Maritime Commission's Division of Emergency Shipping to coordinate requirements of the government for space on intercoastal and coastwise vessels for cargo necessary to national defense.

The following additional ships acquired under the Ship Requisition Act have been allocated to various services: Mangalia, Rumanian, chartered to the Navy. Dino, Mongolia, San Leonardo and Ida Z. O., all Italian, to United States Lines under bareboat charter.

Lundby, Danish, also to United States Lines.

Nordhval, Nordpol, and Nordvest, all Danish, to Union Steamship Company of New Zealand for service between Canada and Australasia under Panamanian flag.

The West Gotomaka, of the commission's own laid-up fleet, will be chartered to Mississippi Shipping Company to carry coal from Mobile to the east coast of South America.

National Guard

Instructions issued by the National Guard Bureau provide for the administration of the National Guard in the home states in connection with the progressive release of individuals from active service and their return to state control.

Enlisted men being returned to state control are to be carried on the rosters of state detachments and accounted for until the expiration of their enlistment periods as extended by the President's Executive Order of 21 Aug. 1941.

The purpose of these orders, the instructions say, is twofold: First, "to protect the interests of National Guard personnel by continuing their service under state control in order to permit their records to show the number of years in Federal service and State service necessary to meet the requirements of the Selective Training and Service Act." If this action had not been taken, those men would have become subject to the draft. Second, the purpose is "to furnish the states a means of maintaining a trained and classified nucleus from which the National Guard may be rebuilt."

Since practically all National Guardsmen who are relieved will have completed a year of active duty training, no provision is to be made now for armory drill or field training for this class of personnel.

General Rose Relieved

Fort Dix, N. J.—Three thousand men and 210 officers of the 69th Field Artillery Brigade passed in review before their commanding general, Brig. Gen. Edward C. Rose, on the Ft. Dix parade ground at dawn 16 Sept. The review was a farewell tribute to General Rose, who returned the next day to his position as a vice-president of the Public Service Company of New Jersey.

Reveille for the troops of the Division's three artillery regiments was at 4:45 A.M., and the men of the 156th, 165th and 157th Field Artillery Regiments were lined up in the darkness by 5:45. The review began at 6:00 with Col. Richard P. Hartdegen, Commanding Officer of the 157th and senior colonel of the brigade, in command of the troops. In presenting the troops to General Rose, Colonel Hartdegen expressed their gratitude and appreciation for his work during the year of his command of the brigade.

After the review the officers of the three regiments marched across the parade ground to General Rose's quarters where they had breakfast. Four hundred and fifty men of the division's Anti-tank Battalion, composed for the most part of former members of the brigade, later staged a miniature review for General Rose.

Monday night members of the 157th Field Artillery marched to General Rose's quarters with their band and sang songs in front of his cottage.

New Aviation Cadet Uniforms

The War Department has authorized replacement of the familiar slate-blue uniform for Army aviation cadets with an olive drab uniform that will need only officer's insignia to be suitable for wear after the cadet receives his commission.

The new uniform will be identical to the regular garb of the officers of the Army Air Forces, except that it will not have the braided sleeve and the shoulder insignia. It will be of elastique, with dark blouse and lighter slacks. The conventional medal U. S. and propeller—and wings—insignia will be worn on the lapel.

While the wearer is a cadet, the regular cadet's gold thread, wings and propeller on a circle of blue cloth will be worn on the sleeve. Upon graduation and commission, he will remove this and substitute sleeve braid and second Lieutenant's bars.

All slate-blue uniforms already acquired by the Quartermaster Department are being concentrated at Randolph Field, Tex., where they will be issued to cadets in that training area until the supply is exhausted. At all other flying schools, cadets entering training will be issued the new officer type uniform.

Army Relief Society

The national Executive Board of the Army Relief Society met 10 Sept. at Mitchel Field, N. Y., where the board members were luncheon guests of Mrs. John C. McDonnell, wife of the Commander of the First Interceptor Command, and of Mrs. Douglas Johnston, wife of the Commanding Officer of the Field.

The Board discussed the results of the large garden party held at Governors Island the preceding Saturday for the benefit of the Society. After the luncheon the ladies were taken on a tour of the hangars and shops on the Field.

At the meeting were:

Mrs. Arthur W. Page, President of the Board; Mrs. Hugh A. Drum, wife of Lieutenant General Drum, Commander of the First Army; Mrs. Robert L. Eichelberger, wife of Brigadier General Eichelberger, Commandant at West Point; Mrs. Frank R. McCoy; Mrs. Dennis E. Nolan, wife of Major General Nolan, ret.; Mrs. S. Benjamin Arnold, wife of Colonel Arnold, ret.; Mrs. E. Sanderson Cushman; Mrs. Benjamin N. Kerfoot, wife of Colonel Kerfoot, ret.; Mrs. Arthur Poillon, wife of Colonel Poillon, ret.; Mrs. Roger G. Alexander, wife of Colonel Alexander; Mrs. Aristedes Moreno, wife of Colonel Moreno, ret.; Mrs. Ellis Knowles; Mrs. Chauncey L. Fenton, wife of Colonel Fenton; and Mrs. Roy E. Terwilliger.

Deny Censorship Information

The House of Representatives this week accepted adverse reports from both its Military and Naval Affairs Committees on proposed resolutions requesting the War and Navy Departments to furnish Congress with information relative to "a plan providing for compulsory censorship of the press and radio." Each committee accompanied its adverse report with a letter from the Department recommending against its enactment.

AC Master Sergeants

Through an error in printing, the following men were listed in the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL of 23 Aug. as having been promoted to master sergeant, Air Corps, whereas they actually were promoted to technical sergeant.

Charles C. Lyon, George W. Rowland, John T. Yarbrough, Roy W. Wilton and Ned J. Martini.

In addition the following have been promoted to master sergeant, Air Corps, effective 1 Aug.: Joseph J. Valente, Mason H. White, Eben B. Taylor and Forrest M. John.

Appointments in Army of U. S.

Passage by the Senate on 17 Sept. of the bill (H. J. Res. 199) authorizing the War Department to make temporary appointments in the Army of the United States completed legislative action on the measure which now awaits only the signature of President Roosevelt to become law.

When the measure becomes law, it is understood that the War Department will cease making appointments in the Officers Reserve Corps and will, for some time at least, make all appointments originally in the Army of the United States. All such appointments will be without any affiliation to any arm or service.

Probably the first to be so commissioned under the new bill will be the graduates of the officers candidates schools, who instead of receiving commissions in the Reserve Corps will receive commissions in the Army of the United States. The net effect will be that after the termination of the emergency and they are discharged from the Army of the United States they will have no further connection with the Army and no military status.

Navy Trains English Airmen

A number of student pilots, observers and air gunners, of the Royal Air Force and the Royal Navy are now undergoing elimination flight training under supervision of the U. S. Navy personnel, the Navy Department announced this week.

The training is being carried on at the Naval Reserve Aviation Base, Grosse Ile, Mich., and two groups have already reported there, the first on 16 Aug., and the second on 16 Sept. Other classes will report monthly, the Navy Department said. The British student personnel, throughout the courses, will be administered, berthed, quartered, and treated generally in the same manner as enlisted students of the U. S. Navy.

Foreign Service Expanded

Any Reserve Officer desiring foreign service duty at any of the stations now occupied by United States forces is authorized to make application through channels to The Adjutant General for such duty, indicating in his application his preference of assignment, the War Department announced this week.

The normal tour of foreign service for officers is limited by law to two years for a single tour of duty, except in the case of actual or threatened hostilities in which event it may be extended at the direction of the Secretary of War. For a number of years regular Army personnel have been permitted to volunteer for overseas station, and the present policy merely extends this privilege to officers of the Reserve.

The War Department said that each application will be considered on its own merits, and every effort will be made to accommodate the individual Reserve Officer.

Reinstatement Policy

A change of policy affecting the reinstatement of former Reserve Officers to conform to the age standards of Selective Service has been announced by the War Department. Under the new ruling, former Reserve Officers between the ages of 21 and 28 may be reappointed in the lowest grade of their former branches provided they can meet the following conditions: original appointment as a Reserve Officer was made subsequent to 1933; they were in an eligible status at the time the Reserve appointment was terminated; their appointments were not terminated for misconduct or similar cause; they passed a final type physical examination; they have the approval of the Corps Area or Department Commander or Chief of the Arm or Service concerned; and finally they attain a certificate of capacity.

Applicants, in the event they are reappointed, will be ordered to extended active duty for at least a year whenever their services are required. However, no individual will be appointed until after he has obtained a certificate of capacity. Previously, former Reserve Officers could be reappointed up to 36 years of age.

Marine Corps Selection Boards

A Marine Corps Selection Board is scheduled to convene on 16 Oct. to recommend officers for promotion to the grades of brigadier general and colonel, U. S. Marine Corps. Another selection board is scheduled to convene 6 Nov., to recommend officers for promotion to the grade of lieutenant colonel and major, U. S. Marine Corps. Names of board members will be announced later.

American Legion Resolutions

Delegates at the American Legion convention, held in Milwaukee, Wis., this week gave strong support to President Roosevelt's foreign policy, at the same time reiterating opposition to communism, fascism, and nazism. The convention affirmed a report of the Committee on National Defense which called for an end of the present legal limitations on the use of most of the Army outside the Western Hemisphere and for a policy of preparedness to "carry the war to the enemy" if war became unavoidable.

The convention also called for the repeal of the neutrality act, demanded universal military training, Federal regulation of war supply agencies, urged an increase in pay for men in the service, and resolved that morale should be divorced from welfare and recreation and made wholly a function of Army command. Delegates, after a close vote further resolved to support aid to Russia, while another resolution called on labor and capital to cooperate in the present emergency.

Drew Field

Drew Field, Tampa, Fla., now a sub-post of MacDill Field, has been designated as a separate post and placed in an exempted status and under direct control and jurisdiction of the Commanding General, Air Force Combat Command.

Maj. Gen. Richardson's Critique

"That terrain in the key to successful military operations" is a conclusion presented by Maj. Gen. Robert C. Richardson, commanding general VII Army Corps, addressing a critique of recent maneuvers to officers at Hodge, La., on 10 Sept. General Richardson's critique with its important summaries follows:

Text of Address

"In the theater, dramatists often use a technique whereby the drama is opened with the climax, followed immediately by a reversal of the action to the events that build up to the climax. Today I will use the technique of the theater and begin this conference by complimenting the Corps and everyone connected with it for its excellent work in the maneuver which has just been concluded, in preventing the First Armored Division from encircling our left flank and the Second Cavalry Division the right flank. Both of these highly mobile units which attempted to effect a so-called pincer movement and encircle the Seventh Corps were stopped dead in their tracks.

"The details of the operations have been clearly presented to you by Colonel Hodges, the G-3, and therefore I shall confine my remarks to some of the more interesting features that impressed me as Corps Commander, and perhaps attempt to describe my reactions to the events as they developed. In other words, I shall try and comment upon this maneuver entirely from the echelon of the commander. In this situation, the Seventh Army Corps, composed of three National Guard divisions, the 27th, 33rd, and 35th, was opposed by the Fifth and Sixth triangular divisions, the Second Cavalry Division, and the First Armored Division of the Regular Army. It appeared to be a test between highly mobile forces, richly endowed with mechanization, on the one hand, against the slower infantry divisions endowed with more weight but with almost no mechanization. The Regular Army units were rich in reconnaissance agencies, in contrast to the poverty of

Army Plucking Board

Secretary of War Stimson said this week that no recommendations have yet been made to him by the Board of Generals designated to select officers of the Regular Army for removal from the active list.

No announcement has been made as to the membership of the Removal Board, but the presence around the War Department of the following officers has led to a general belief that they have been called to constitute the board: Maj. Gen. Charles D. Herron, Maj. Gen. Hamilton S. Hawkins, Maj. Gen. Andrew Moses, Maj. Gen. Joseph P. Tracy, and Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short.

Inspectors General Instructed

A detailed list of subjects which inspectors general have been instructed to notice during annual inspections in the fiscal year 1942 was recently released by the War Department in a circular letter.

Among a total of 27 special questions which the inspectors will answer in their reports are those concerning economy in expenditures; supply of food, clothing and equipment; adequate allotment of officers and enlisted men to elements of Corps Area Service Commands; percentage of officers assigned to troop units who are away from their units on detached service or special duty; discharges and their effect on conservation of manpower; and adequate training of men in Replacement Training Centers—these among many other special points the inspectors general have been instructed to include in their future reports.

those existing in the Seventh Corps. Other than the 107th Cavalry horse-mechanized regiment, and three improvised reconnaissance groups from the respective divisions, the Corps Commander had no other ground agencies to reconnoiter the enemy. No one who has not had the responsibility of high command can appreciate the apprehension and anxiety that exists in the mind of the commander when he feels so poor in reconnaissance means. The commander has a feeling of frustration, somewhat, I imagine, like a blind person. This feeling was accentuated when the directive from the Second Army pinned the Seventh Corps to definite terrain, in order to be certain that the opposing forces would clash within certain limits. From the setup of the controlling powers, it was obvious that an attempt would be made to execute by the mobile forces a pincer movement to surround the Seventh Corps.

"An intense study of the means at my disposal with a view of exploiting them to the fullest became of paramount importance, particularly since this Corps had no anti-tank battalion and no Corps engineer regiment, which deficiencies in an operation of this character were most serious. The disparity in the reconnaissance agencies which the enemy possessed and our own was so great as to be embarrassing. It was certainly a great handicap. Nevertheless, what means the Seventh Corps possessed were exploited to the maximum and with excellent effect.

Utilize Terrain

"In actual weight and in numbers of personnel, we were superior to the enemy, and therefore it became necessary to make the most accurate study of the terrain to see whereby we could utilize it to our advantage in order to offset the mobility of our opponent. Upon examination it was found that the bayous and the paucity of the road net was all in our favor and against them. Although the map revealed this advantage, experience has taught that one cannot always depend upon the map. It was necessary, therefore, to order air and ground reconnaissances of every bayou, of every road, and of every bridge. Officers of my staff and I personally made air reconnaissance of the entire area, and upon our return compared what had actually been seen from the air with the map. In many instances we found things both advantageous and disadvantageous that had not been disclosed by the map. In addition, the divisions were ordered to make ground reconnaissances of the banks of the streams, of the roads and of the bridges. The accumulation of all of this data on the terrain was of extraordinary value to me in making final dispositions. From the study it became very obvious to us that the forces of the Seventh Corps could be employed most efficiently in a series of delaying and rear guard actions, retreating from one bayou to another. This scheme offered us the chance of holding off the threatening encirclement long enough to permit the withdrawal of the Corps farther south between Castor Creek on the right and Saline Bayou on the left, on which our flanks would be perfectly secure from either the armored division or the cavalry. The terrain study revealed a number of corridors through which the Corps could pass to the south, and if it were possible to withdraw to the position between the Saline Bayou and Castor Creek, the Corps would be safe. The success of the maneuver was, in addition, contingent upon a highly integrated plan of demolitions. The Corps Anti-Tank Officer, in conference with the division anti-tank officers, made a complete plan of demolitions, which were very well executed. This task was no mean one, as there were so many bridges in the area upon the destruction of which depended the safety of our flanks. It was not possible to initiate demolitions prior to midnight Saturday-Sunday, so that the facilities available to the Corps made it imperative that the demolition program be highly organized and executed with rapidity.

"The salvation of the Seventh Army Corps, its escape from the arms of the pincers, lay in moving rapidly as far south as possible, beginning at 12:01 the night of September 7-8. You will recall the general disposition of the Corps. The 27th Division was acting as the rear guard of the Corps, fighting a delaying action against the Fifth and Sixth triangular divisions. On the left the 33rd Division was containing the First Armored Division, and on the right the 35th was opposed to the Second Cavalry Division reinforced with the Fourth Cavalry mechanized. The scheme of maneuver adopted was to mobilize every available truck in the Corps, place them at the disposition of the 27th Division, and under cover of darkness slip this division south in the gap between the 33rd and the 35th to a position thirty-five miles south in Corps reserve, prepared to reinforce either the 35th Division to the east or the 33rd Division to the west. It was realized that this maneuver was risky, as it did not terminate until approximately ten o'clock the next morning, and if discovered by the armored division opened our center to penetration by the mechanized forces, particularly since the terrain in that neighborhood was peculiarly appropriate for tank action. The movement of the 27th Division was admirably executed with logistic precision.

Locating Enemy

"The next morning at daybreak all reconnaissance agencies, air and ground, were put into operation with the purpose of locating the mass of the enemy. During the day all reports from both aviation and ground indicated a flock of enemy reconnaissance around the entire perimeter of the Corps. During the morning I was in my airplane over the area and witnessed the efforts of the enemy to locate our divisions. During the entire morning the build-up occurred, but all reports showed that the enemy were uncertain regarding our mass. I was therefore not perturbed by the innumerable reconnaissance agencies beyond and within our lines, because it was realized that no coordinated attack could be made by the enemy until he knew exactly our dispositions.

"Similarly during the morning I was somewhat in the dark as to the direction from which the attack of the armored division would come. About noon all reports indicated that it would come from the west, as the mass of the motorized force was in bivouac near Castor. It was obvious that the armored force could not prepare for an attack the rest of that day, and therefore I knew that during the oncoming night it would be possible to withdraw the 33rd and 35th Divisions to areas further south, just on a line north of the general area of the 27th Division, resulting in a very compact triangular disposition of the three divisions of the Corps. Meanwhile the entire day was employed in perfecting the plan of demolitions.

"Having decided whence would come the main attack, I dispatched a brigade combat team of the 27th Division reinforced by medium artillery to the west to meet the threat. In addition the anti-tank battalion of the 33rd Division was ordered to that area, while the anti-tank battalion of the 27th Division plus a brigade combat team, both in mobile reserve, guarded the back door of the Corps, so to speak, to prevent any possible eruption into the rear by the mechanized forces.

"The brigade combat team was gotten underway quite promptly, but all of its elements did not arrive in position until ten o'clock that evening. Once on the scene, the brigade quickly pushed back across the river the reconnaissance agencies of the mechanized forces and consolidated its position for the night.

Cavalry in Contact

"Meanwhile the Second Cavalry Division on the east flank was in contact with the covering forces of the 35th Division, against which they operated successfully because they committed a large part of their force in the action. Never once did the Second Cavalry Division come near the main body protecting the east flank.

The next morning, despite every effort made by the armored division on the west it was not able to make any progress against the well organized demolitions and the mobile anti-tank battalions brought into action. This operation on the west flank was not only of great interest but of great importance to all officers, because from it certain lessons might be drawn. In swampy terrain where the mechanized forces are forced to operate on the roads, it is possible to stop them if one has offensive anti-tank units and if terrain and demolitions are intelligently used.

The Fifth and Sixth Divisions which were pursuing the Corps lost contact with our covering forces for the reason, I believe, that their infantry detrucked to fight our covering forces, which pulled out during the night and left them deployed. The problem ended at noon with both flanks intact, having successfully withstood an encirclement by the mobile force of the First Mechanized Division and Second Cavalry Division.

"Had the problem continued the Corps was in a position that night to continue its withdrawal with very fair chances of finally reaching its destination, Alexandria. It would have been delayed in repairing the bridges which had been destroyed to the south, but on the other hand the pursuing forces would have been equally delayed by the demolition and destroyed bridges which the Corps would have left in its wake.

"In this movement attention should be invited to interesting features of the operations of each of the divisions. The movement of the 27th Division employed a column of approximately 100 miles and the number of trucks used was 1715. One battalion of the 104th Field Artillery was moved altogether 138 miles in 36 hours. The plan of demolitions of the 35th Division was so effective that the Second Cavalry could make no headway on the east flank. In the withdrawal of the 33rd Division during the night, a complete redistribution of its forces was made successfully.

"I should like now to dwell for a moment on some of the lessons which seem to me to be emerging from the operations in which we have been engaged. In the first place, the introduction into modern warfare of mechanized forces with their great mobility and with their rich reconnaissance elements has made it imperative that infantry divisions be supplied with strong reconnaissance detachments, for the reason that, as in this case, infantry divisions may not be operating with mechanized forces. The triangular divisions have reconnaissance agencies, but the eighteen National Guard divisions have none, and are handicapped by their absence. Secondly, the mobility of the mechanized forces has enlarged the area of operations and our horizon, with the result that this development has rendered inadequate the radio equipment now issued to troops, because the distances are greater than was contemplated when the radio equipment was manufactured. It is a question that must be studied.

Observation Aviation

"The existing conception of the employment of observation aviation must be broadened and revised so as to give to the ground forces the service to which they are entitled. In close terrain such as that in which we are operating, a large quantity of observation aviation is needed. The area is so extensive that it can only be covered adequately by zoning it and assigning to each zone sufficient observation planes. If the zones are limited to the radius of the radio equipment in the planes, then the present radio equipment may be sufficient, but as it is air observation squadrons are required to do so many missions over vast terrain due to the lack of sufficient observation that the radio fades out at twenty-five or thirty miles and communications between the plane and the command post are interrupted. Mechanization has therefore had its effect on our conception of observation aviation, and certainly has had its effect on the type and strength of radios that will be used in the future, and the motorization of the infantry divisions has had a similar effect on ground communications. It is impossible for the signal corps to run such extensive lines as are required by the new dispositions that a Corps Commander may make with his Corps in view of its mobility. In time of war the commercial lines will largely remedy the condition commented upon, provided of course that we are operating in a more or less civilized community. Pursuing the thought on communications further, it is my judgment that in the infantry the communications within the battalions could be improved. If there is one place where communications should be developed it is within the battalion, since our best information comes from the front lines and should be transmitted quickly to the rear. At the present time such transmission is slow and cumbersome, depending largely on runners. The walkie-talkie has not in this maneuver proved to be very reliable.

"From personal air reconnaissance I observe that the troops are becoming quite air-conscious. It is difficult now to pick up bivouacs. Whereas formerly they were easily betrayed by a mosquito bar or by vehicles on the perimeter or at the entrance, these indications are no longer visible. It is very difficult to pick up the troops in bivouac. In this matter of training there has been a great improvement.

"I wish that I could say as much for the road discipline of the troops and for the loading of the trucks. Commanders have not yet learned how to control their convoys on the road nor their troops when marching. Officers do not exercise their authority or control. When marching it is forbidden to allow men to fall out at Coca-Cola stands or eating places as has been observed. If officers and non-commissioned officers exercised the control which they are directed to do and the authority which is vested in them, such conditions would not be tolerated. I insist that officers do exercise this control. The trucks are poorly loaded in most cases. Many of them on the road look as if the baggage had been loaded without care. There must be precision and order in the loadings. The covers must be securely lashed down and not allowed to flap in the breeze.

Lessons

"To summarize: the lessons to be drawn from this exercise are:

"a. That terrain is the key to successful military operations and it should be studied profoundly.

"b. To stop mechanized forces a highly integrated plan of demolitions coupled with the use of aggressive anti-tank battalions has great chances of success. The same preparation against horse cavalry will be successful.

"c. The wide range of mechanized forces has necessitated our restudy of the type of radios that we must have.

"d. The broadening of the area of operations brought about by mechanization will require additional observation aviation for all divisions and a new type of radio for ground communication.

"e. Anti-tank battalions, though recently organized, have already proven of inestimable value. Commanders should give much thought to the organization of these units and make suggestions for their perfection.

"f. I will now close as I began, by complimenting the Corps for its excellent teamwork in this maneuver and the meticulous attention given to the orders. I visited many parts of the Corps and was gratified to find both at night and day great enthusiasm and interest among the officers and men. There was a certain vibrant atmosphere that was felt even at Corps Headquarters. We are beginning to be a team."

Two Destroyers Launched

Second and third destroyers to be launched since the Navy took over operation of the Federal Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co., Kearny, N. J., the USS Hambleton and the USS Rodman were launched simultaneously yesterday afternoon, 19 Sept. The USS Atlanta, 6,000 ton cruiser, was previously launched on 6 Sept., 11 days after the Navy "occupied" the plant, now being managed by Rear Adm. Harold G. Bowen, USN.

A cargo ship, Louise Lykes, will be launched this afternoon for the Maritime Commission and Lykes Bros. Steamship Co., N. Y.
